Land, Air Power Given Equal Status By Army

New Regulation Backs Principle Of Independent U. S. Air Force

By the Associated Press

The War Department has established the principle of a separate air force in a new field service regulation declaring "land power and air power are coequal and interdependent forces: Neither is an auxiliary of the other."

Disclosure of this description of the relationship of the two forces came in a revision of the field service manual entitled "Command and Employment of Air Power," issued as a superseding order for a regulation which had been put into effect as recently as January 18. The revision was printed under date of July 21.

While not creating a separate air force—a step which aviation proponents have urged repeatedly for some time—the order establishes an equality between the land and air forces, both of them to act under a superior commander in the theater of operations.

Signed by Marshall

The regulations were issued by order of the Secretary of War and signed by Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff. The War Department made no public announcement of this step.

The principle of a single command is in use at present. An outstanding example is Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's position as supreme commander in the Mediterranean area through which he has been able to use land, sea and air power in combined opeartions with tremendous effect.

The new regulation appears to write into the War Department manual a definition of the status of the air force which confirms the experience in actual war operations. Discussing the doctrine of employment of air power, it says:

"The gaining of air superiority is the first requirement for the success of any major land operations. Air forces may be properly and profitably employed against enemy sea power, land power and air power. However, land forces operating without air superiority must take such extensive security measures against hostile air attack that their mobility and ability to defeat the enemy land forces are greatly reduced. Therefore, air forces must be employed primarily against the enemy's air forces until air superiority is obtained. In this way only can destructive and demoralizing air attacks against land forces be minimized and the inherent mobility of modern land and air forces be exploited to the fullest."

Flexibility Cited

Continuing with a discussion of command of air power, the regulation states:

"In the inherent flexibility of air power is its greatest asset. This flexibility makes it possible to em-

Russian Welcome

Moscow, Oct. 19.—Seated around a conference table the foreign secretaries of the United States, Britain and Russia talked for two hours and 15 minutes tonight at the first formal session of the three-power meeting to discuss war and postwar problems.

Details of the conversations will not be made public until after the conference, but it was understood the opening session between U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov was satisfactory.

Although Hull, Eden and Molotov held informal preliminary discussions last night soon after the arrival of the visiting officials, tonight's session marked the first formal meeting. It was understood they plan to meet once daily.

Previously a spokesman said the tri-power conference gave the

Roosevelt Holds to Stand On Subsidies

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

With a lengthy food message to Congress on the desk before him, President Roosevelt yesterday served notice to leaders of four major farm organizations he will not compromise with his belief in the use of subsidies to hold down living costs.

Farmers have been taking subsidies since 1933 and long before, he later told his press conference, declaring the parity formula for setting farm prices a subsidy program within itself.

The formula for using subsidies to stabilize retail food prices during wartime has been working out satisfactorily, he maintained, and to depart from it would be to welcome inflation.

Quotes Farm Bureau Head

The Chief Executive quoted Ed O'Neal, president of the Farm Bureau Federation, as saying "a little inflation would not hurt anybody." He likened this attitude to that of a person willing to take a little cocaine.

The food message will go to Congress within a day or two, the President said. He told farm leaders he was sure public opinion was behind him and, he believed, a majority sentiment on Capitol Hill. If the two bills already introduced to prohibit new food subsidies and stop those already in effect should receive a majority vote, he made it clear he would veto them. If Congress should then repass them, he said, the political effect would work against the legislators and not against him.

Meantime, the farm leaders were fighting bitterly among themselves, with only James G. Patton, presi-

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific (Wednesday), Oct. 20.—Destruction of 60 Japanese planes in a new bombing assault on Rabaul, New Britain, bringing the total there to more than 200 within less than a week, was reported today by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Along with the victory, however, a spokesman disclosed the first Allied ground reverse in many weeks in the New Guinea jungle front.

Mitchell medium bombers, at the cost of three of their number bagged 24 planes in the air, 36 on the ground, and sank a destroyer, a corvette and a 6000-ton cargo ship.

In addition, another 6000-ton merchantman and a second corvette were damaged in a low level strike Monday at Rabaul which October 12 was pounded with 350 tons of bombs by the biggest airforce yet amassed for a single operation in this sector.

Jab Success Unspecified

The Japanese ground success, of unspecified extent, was scored in the area of Sattelberg, 15 miles northwest of Finschhafen, New Guinea, whose capture on October 2 by Australians provided MacArthur with a potential springboard along the Huon Gulf for a short overwater invasion of New Britain.

The communique today made no reference to the reverse but a headquarters spokesman said the Japanese, who have been holding on grimly around Sattelberg since they lost Finschhafen, had made some progress down from that mission. This marked the first such success, however temporary, reported since the Japanese launched ground-gaining counterattacks below Salamaua in early September.

Blows Coordinated

Headquarters said today that remnants of forces which tried to land from barges Sunday near Finschhafen had been wiped out, and that a total of 61 enemy dead had been counted.

The Monday smash at Rabaul, pivotal enemy air and sea base in the New Guinea-Solomons secor was coordinated with other air blows against New Britain which encompassed all sections of that crscent-shaped island. Rabaul is

Americans Smash Yawning Breach In Foes' Defenses; 8 Towns Taken

By Noland Norgaard
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 19.—Badly mauled in six days of heavy attacks by American and British troops, the German army guarding the gateways to Rome fell back on new mountain positions today under fresh onslaughts by Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army after surrendering eight more Italian towns and villages.

The enemy, shorn of air support, fled from his last positions overlooking the lower Volturno River when American forces ripped a yawning breach in Nazi defenses 30 miles inland from the Mediterranean coast, where the Volturno swings in a northwesterly direction.

The bloody and furiously fought battle of the Volturno, as such, ended when American troops rammed their way from three to five miles through the Germans' strong mountain defenses to seize five towns in twin thrusts on either side of the upper Volturno. These villages, taken in bitter, hard-won infantry advances, were Gioia, Liberi, Faicchio, Pontelatone and Alvignano.

Strategic Mountains

"These gains on the mountain heights are where they count," said an Allied military spokesman. "If the mountains are taken the Germans will be forced to abandon the lowlands along the coast."

That the enemy already was feeling this pressure was indicated in an announcement that British amphibious forces which landed near the mouth of the Volturno last week had captured the town of Bressa, near the coast, just north of the river.

The end of the Volturno battle coincided with fresh gains by Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army on the central and Adriatic sectors of the fighting line.

Some of the day's hardest fighting developed in the Eighth Army's capture of Santo Stefano after a 4-mile advance. The Germans counterattacked furiously time and again, but were repelled by Montgomery's veterans. Possession of Montecilfone, near the Adriatic coast, was firmly secured after a day of hard street fighting.

New Threat to Flank

As a result of the new American breakthrough on the right wing of General Clark's front, enemy forces north of Capua were confronted with a fresh threat to their flank.

One American force drove through the town of Alvignano, 7½ miles above the Volturno, northeast of Capua. This thrust came along a road which a few miles farther north swings westward and makes a junction with one of the main Naples-Rome highways—via Casalina—at a point 14 miles north of Capua.

Another American unit seized Gioia, on the east side of the upper Volturno, 7 miles northeast of Al-

Republicans Join to Fight Tax Increases

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

House Republican leaders yesterday took a firm stand against any increases in Federal taxes, but speculation promptly arose that their action might foreshadow a bipartisan drive to force Administration acquiescence in a sales tax.

Tax-writing Democrats said the Republican stand killed any chance of a tax bill—but both sides apparently left themselves free to move toward a sales levy.

This has been opposed by the Administration, sponsored in the Ways and Means Committee by a Democrat, Representative Robertson of Virginia, and accorded a hands-off policy to date by Republican committeemen. Several of the latter, however, have qualified their sales tax statements by saying they would oppose it "except as a last resort."

The no-tax program sponsored by House Republicans came as Treasury officials presented for the committee's record three-volume typed study of Treasury-prepared "Considerations Respecting a Federal Retail Sales Tax." It did not overturn the Treasury's announced opposition to the sales levy, but gave voluminous data about how

Cairo Hears 100,000 Serbs Drive on Nazis

By the Associated Press

London, Oct.. 19.—Gen. Draja Mihailovic has flung his army of more than 100,000 Yugoslavs against the Germans and is advancing steadily toward the great loop of the Danube, the bottleneck on the river's course via the Rumanian oilfields to the Black Sea, a Cairo report said tonight.

According to these advices, Mihailovic, in his first activity in months, is threatening German traffic on the Danube, which passes in northwestern Serbia through the famous "Iron Gate," formed by high bluffs dominating a narrow stretch of the river.

The activity of his forces coincided with the announcement that Allied planes yesterday made an intial attack in Yugoslavia, bombing the transportation facilities in the strategic city of Skoplje, the capital of southern Serbia 60 miles

Still They Go

London (Wednesday), Oct. 20.—Red army troops, pouring through a major breakthrough southeast of Kremenchug, badly mauled four German divisions yesterday to win a railway junction deep behind large German forces in the Dnieper River bend and cut the Nazis' main escape route to the west, Moscow announced early today.

The midnight communique broadcast by Moscow and recorded here by the Soviet monitor, said that in this one operation alone the Red army troops captured 1800 Germans, while 2000 Germans were killed on another sector.

Pyatikhatka, rail junction more than 30 miles inside the Dnieper at its nearest point, was the major prize to fall to the Russians.

Soviet tank units first routed a defending Nazi artillery regiment at Zaporozhye, 9 miles north of Pyatikhatka, the war bulletin said, and the capture of Pyatikhatka followed. Pyatikhatka is full 70 miles west of German-held Dnepropetrovsk and astride the main railway from that city west to Znameka.

In this advance, which carried forward for 9 to 12 miles, the Red army rolled over more than 100 towns and villages.

Nazi Remnants Mopped Up

North of Kiev, Soviet forces "completed the annihilation of remnants" of a motorized infantry division which had been routed earlier, the communique said.

A Moscow dispatch said the All-Slavonic committee meeting in the Soviet capital announced that Polish patriots fighting with the Red army participated in the crossing of the Dnieper.

Both Berlin and Moscow described the fighting southeast of Kremenchug as extremely bloody. In that area the Russians also captured Shchastlivaya and Zelyenaya, respectively 20 and 15 miles west of Pyatikhatka.

Nazis Admit Breakthrough

Berlin already had acknowledged a breakthrough on this sector and had told of a Nazi retreat of 12 miles.

Berlin throughout the day had been telling of the great battle in this region, stating that the Russians "time and again" threw in large reinforcements. The battle, Berlin said, was growing in fury, and the Russians were using their air force in an "extraordinarily extensive manner."

Berlin added that "this fighting must be expected to continue also during the next few days"—an apparent indication the Germans expect to fall back farther.

The Russians' employment "of a large number of motorized and tank forces induced the Germans to fall back some 20 kilometers (12 miles) to prepared positions," Berlin said.

Pyatikhatka lies only 40 miles northeast of the mining center of Krivoi Rog, in a region rich in

Dog Attacks Woman in Street; Saved by Navy Officer's Wife

Attacked by a mongrel dog in front of the Shoreham Hotel in the 2500 block of Calvert st. nw, yesterday, Mrs. Estelle Kirby, 63, of 3100 N. 5th st., Arlington, Va., was bitten severely before the wife of a Navy commander drove away the beast with a well-aimed rock.

Seized from behind by the "large black brute with brown spots," the victim was thrown to the sidewalk. Her coat and dress were torn from her shoulders as the dog evidently sought her throat. Her right and left wrists and legs were cut by the dog's fangs.

Mrs. Robert D. Conrad, wife of Lieutenant Commander Conrad, USN, was about 40 feet away and ran to the woman's assistance, picking up a large stone on the way. Without hesitation, she struck the dog with the stone and he fled across the street after a police dog. The latter ran away.

Hysterical and bleeding, Mrs. Kirby was taken to Emergency Hospital by a passing motorist and given first aid to wounds on her shoulder, ankle, wrists and arms.

Dr. Edwin Mitchell of Emergency Hospital described the wounds as "very serious for dog bites." He said Mrs. Kirby was released to the care of her private physician for observation and Pasteur treatment if necessary.

Mrs. Conrad, who was walking her cocker spaniel toward Connecticut ave., later told how she saw Mrs. Kirby walking in the opposite direction.

"I saw this big, black dog trotting toward me," Mrs. Conrad stated, "and picked up my little dog. The mongrel hesitated and I said 'Get out of here,' and he ran past me toward the other woman.

"He snapped at her ankle and when she turned he leaped to her shoulder and pulled her down. He was like a wild animal.

"He clamped down on one of her wrists," declared Mrs. Conrad, "and started dragging her along. She was was bleeding awfully when I found a rock and hurled it at him. It was a horrible sight . . . I'll never forget it."

Plant's Future Debated

Navy Says 20 Fired Pro-Nazi Suspects Rehired at Brewster

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Although the United States Navy caused 27 persons in the union and management at the Long Island City plant of the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. to be fired March, 1942, on suspicion they might carry on pro-Nazi activities, all but six of the union men and one management representative were reinstated with back pay from the Government by the following June, it was disclosed yesterday.

Capt. George Keller, chief of the Navy's labor relations division, told the House Naval Affairs subcommittee investigating Brewster's production failure, that Local 365 UAW-CIO had broken its pledge to the Navy not to fight for reinstatement of those members suspected of pro-Nazi activities. He said nothing was said to the new private management by the Navy about the records of the men reinstated.

This disclosure was part of an ugly picture of a vital war plant, at one time partially managed from behind the walls of a Federal penitentiary, sabotaged by enemy agents and others, producing airplanes which caused the death of Navy pilots before they entered combat, spread upon the committ-

Churchill Refuses to Answer Charges of Senatorial Critics

By Ernest Agnew

London, Oct. 19.—Prime Minister Churchill declined to reply in Commons today to criticisms of Britain by touring United States Senators, but said that a full statement of the facts, prepared at his request, would be kept in Commons for the purpose of the record, "or, if it should be expedient, for publication."

Capt. Peter MacDonald, a Conservative, asked the Prime Minister if attention had been called to the "specific charges of unfair action and of bad faith made against the British in their report to Congress by the Senators . . . and whether to avoid a diffusion of ill will he will place on record the British view of the facts."

"The report in question was made to Congress in secret session," Churchill replied, "and I therefore am neither fully nor accurately acquainted with its nature. A summary of 10 conclusions reached by the Senators has been printed in the record of the United States Senate.

"These conclusions bring no charges of the kind referred to in the question."

In addition to the Senate summary of the Senators' report, Churchill said, many stories have been published purporting to represent what individual Senators have said.

"I am well aware of the pain which some of these unfair and probably unauthorized statements have caused," the Prime Minister said, "and I have carefully considered whether it is my duty to make a public reply.

"I have come to the conclusion that there would be no advantages to His Majesy's Government taking part in this wordy warfare, especially at a time when British and United States armies are engaged shoulder to shoulder in battles taking place or impending on the Italian front and when the tee records by Navy witnesses.

Committee members mined for information yesterday from reluctant Navy officers about the Brewster plans, and uncovered just enough to show there is much more to learn.

As one example of the sort of person who was reinstated after appeal was made, Keller cited the instance of a Brewster employe who was receiving registered letters from his brother in Germany.

"It developed upon further investigation," Keller said, "that this man was also a stamp collector and had been receiving stamps from his brother." After the hearing one committee member said he was ...zzled about this reinstatement ...e stamps could be used as a ...

...er digging in public, the com... took a late recess for lunch ...went back into executive session to receive accurate information on the Navy's future plans for Brewster and its exact production figures. Members came out still uncertain as to whether the committee will demand the cancellation of millions of dollars of Navy contracts forthwith, at the conclusion of the hearings, or whether 60 days' grace will be given Henry Kaiser, production genius, to see if he can retrieve the millions of dollars of taxpayers' funds already sunk by the Navy in Brewster plants.

It was Navy's own cost accountants stationed at the Brewster plants who admitted that if Kaiser is successful in operating the plants the profits will go to the stockholders, James Work and the Miranda brothers, A. J. and I. J. The Miranda pair have been released from a Federal penitentiary after conviction of violating the Neutrality Act.

The public hearing was opened by Chairman Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia, who called attention to a story in the day's Washington Post asserting that Keller had informed Government officials early in 1942 that the crux of Brewster trouble was activity on the part of pro-Germans in the plant.

Asserting the committee must take cognizance of such statements in the public prints, Drewry called upon Keller to give the facts.

Discharges Requested by Navy

Keller said that the Navy, under an agreement made several months previous by the Army, Navy, CIO, AFL, and Railway Brotherhood, had requested the firing of 27 individuals connected with the plant on suspicion that they might interfere with the war effort, either because of prior connections with the German-American Bund, or because they had relatives in Germany which would make them subject to foreign pressure, or other reasons.

Keller said he went to the Long Island City plant in March to discuss the matter with officals including Tom De Lorenzo, union boss. The list of 27, including 22 union members, and 5 management representatives, Keller said, had been whittled down by the Navy from a list of 70 the security officer for the Third Naval District had suggested be removed from war work.

At first De Loenzor, Keller asserted, objected to the discharge of the union men. Keller quoted him as saying:

"The management here is honeycombed with pro-Germans. There are just as many pro-Germans in management as in the union."

Later De Lorenzo, shown that management men were on the list, too, agreed that the union would not aid any of the men in making appeals. The men were all discharged, but the union came to their defense in direct violation of De Lorenzo's pledge. De Lorenzo claimed he had been overruled by the union membership, but under a rain of questions from committee members, particularly Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana. Keller admitted that De Lorenzo had often used that excuse to violate pledges, even though he was absolute dictator of the union.

By June, Keller told the committee all but six union members and one management man discharged had been reinstated with due recompense by the Government for the time lost.

Issue of Sabotage

As if to remove any impression that that had been the end of any subversive difficulties at the Brewster plant, Chairman Drewry, looking severely over his horn-rimmed spectacles, said, "We have a report here from the FBI."

Promptly Robert Kline, committee counsel, jumped up with the observation, "That is a confidential report furnished the committee for its information."

"Very well," Drewry continued studying the sheaf of papers in his hand, "We'll talk about hypothetical cases and see if sabotage has stopped at Brewster.

"Suppose I ask you if it is true that within the last two or three months or so, if such actions occurred, would you call them sabotage? What do you have to say about the cutting of insulated ignition switches causing grinding of magnets? What do you say about cutting of wires leading to bomb releases? What do you say about cutting of wiring in the main instrument panels? Is that sabotage?"

"It has a strong implication of sabotage," Keller replied, "and sounds as if someone were attempting to destroy war production." He added that protection of war plants now, however, is in the hands of the Army and he had no first-hand knowledge of these matters.

"Knowing Interference"

The captain admitted that aside from sabotage at the hands of enemy agents, there had also been "knowing interference with war production by both management and labor."

Maas questioned the witness about reports of defects in planes that had caused the death of pilots.

Reports of such instances had been made more than once, Maas said. Keller seemed to have no information on this subject.

Representative Maas (Republican) of Minnesota pressed Capt. Keller, concerning the Miranda activities.

"What about these Miranda brothers who ran the plants partly from the penitentiary?" Maas queried.

"They furnished arms to the Japs and the Germans even against the laws of the United States, didn't they? Do you call that sabotage?"

"Yes," replied Keller briefly.

During the questioning of two young lieutenants in charge of the Navy's cost accounting at Brewster, Lieut. J. G. Gieser and Lieut. (jg) F. M. Tait, Maas asked about reports that a Navy pilot was killed in Florida because Brewster management had refused to accept the advice of Brewster's own engineers and install the right type of equalizer in the planes.

"This is only one example," Maas said, "There were many such."

The Minnesota representative also drew from Navy's accountants an admission that the Navy was still considering whether or not to pay any part of the costs of time cards turned in by strikers during a period last August when the plant was not even in operation.

"Well, you'd better not pay them," Maas warned, "I'm telling that to the Navy, not to you personally."

war to the enemy's closest home waters, have sunk a total of 319 Japanese ships, have probably sunk 36, and have damaged 105 others since December 7, 1941."

All told, the Navy revealed, American armed forces operating under naval direction have sunk a total of 469 Jap ships, probably sunk 64 and damaged 319 for a grand total of 852 warships and merchantmen destroyed or crippled.

This includes attacks made by surface war vessels, subs, naval planes and some Army aircraft which were under Navy command—all destruction announced to date in Navy Department communiques. It does not include the large number of Jap ships sunk or damaged by American fliers or in the Southwest Pacific which are announced by General MacArthur.

Serious Problem for Foe

All told, military men here believe, the losses to the Japanese fleet and merchant shipping are becoming a very serious problem to the enemy high command.

The merchantman toll is considered particularly serious as communications between the Japanese homeland and the overseas empire largely depend upon shipping. Already the enemy has been forced to use large numbers of barges to supply advanced bases.

It is estimated that Japan already has lost about one-third of her merchant marine (about 2,500,000 tons), counting that on hand two years ago and ships built or acquired since. Some 375 enemy freighters and tankers have been sunk in 22 months of war, plus another 160 to 175 such vessels seriously damaged.

Three-quarters of this toll of enemy merchant shipping has been blasted by United States submarines.

Toll of Ships Sunk

The new list of Jap ships sunk by American subs given out by the Navy yesterday included the following ships: Six large tankers, 17 large cargo-supply ships, 3 large troop transports, 45 medium-sized cargo-supply ships, 2 medium-sized tankers, 5 small cargo-supply ships and 20 miscellaneous vessels.

In addition, the communique reported that five medium-sized cargo vessels had been attacked and "probably sunk" and that the following Nip vessels had been damaged by American sub raids: Four large tankers, 2 troop transports, 2 large cargo-supply ships, 31 medium-sized cargo-supply vessels, 1 small cargo-supply vessel and 5 miscellaneous ships.

Secretary Knox said that the announcement of the blasting of this large number of enemy vessels had been withheld until the report would not aid the Japs.

Data made available at the same time by the Navy showed that a total of 125 Jap warships and 344 Nipponese noncombatant craft have been sunk since Pearl Harbor by forces under United States naval command. Including damaged vessels or those listed as "probably sunk," the official toll taken by American naval forces and attached units is 305 warships and 547 noncombatant craft destroyed or crippled.

A breakdown of successful attacks by American submarines listed 39 Japanese warships and 280 noncombatant crafts sunk, 10 Nip warships and 26 noncombatant ships "probably sunk" and 13 enemy warships and 92 supply vessels damaged.

Later Laborite George Strauss asked Sir John Anderson, chancellor of the exchequer, if he would give assurance that the British government "is not taking advantage of the lease-lend agreement to make a financial return and that goods received by this country have not been diverted from their original purpose, in view of the effect of such allegations on our relations with the United States."

vignano and an equal distance north of Amorosi. The road along which this column is advancing also swings toward the coast and joins the main highway to Rome 17 miles north of Capua.

Despite their stubborn withdrwaals of recent days, the Germans still possess a strong defense line in the rugged mountainous area extending from the 2500-foot heights of Massico Ridge, which is only three miles north of British positions near the west coast.

Behind that line the Nazis have the line of the Garigliano River, which reaches the sea 16½ miles north of the Volturno's mouth, and behind that is another mountain chain whose peaks rise to over 7000 feet.

The Allied advance thus is expected to be slow and difficult in coming weeks, partly due to the increasing rains.

750,000 Nazis in Italy

New York, Oct. 19 (INS).—National Broadcasting Company's correspondent in Bern, Switzerland, Paul Archinard, reported today that German armed strength in Italy will total 50 divisions, approximately 750,000 troops, in the next few days. He said that some of the reinforcements are believed to have been drawn from the Russian front.

on the northwestern tip. Other bombing attacks were delivered near the island's center and on the west end.

The Mitchells started the attack at 11 a. m. At 11:40, one formation sank the freighter transport and set a corvette afire, then destroyed 7 of 40 intercepting fighters.

At 12:52 p. m. another formation sank the destroyer and gunboat and, in a 255-minute air battle, destroyed 12 intercepting fighters.

At 12:55 p. m. another formation raided the Tobera airdrome, nine miles south of Rabaul, encountered no interception, and wiped out 12 fighters on the ground.

These reports on the action were early and incomplete.

In addition to the 24 interceptors shot down, 6 others probably were bagged.

A destroyer, gunboat and medium cargo vessel were sunk in the new raid, today's communique said.

Three destroyers were among more than 100 ships, ranging down to harbor craft, sunk in the previous raid in which 177 enemy planes either were demolished or rendered unfit for flying.

Above Rabaul, a crowded medium troop ship was sunk of Kavieng, New Ireland, and two cargo ships were damaged off New Hanover, to the northwest of New Ireland.

About midway up the north New Britain coast at Cape Hoskins, Liberators and Beauforts blasted an air strip for fighters and the refueling of long-range bombers.

On the same day, Liberators bombed the Cape Gloucester airdrome on New Britain's western tip, 85 miles from New Guinea.

Senate Votes Probe Of Communications

The Senate passed unanimously yesterday a resolution directing an Interstate Commerce Subcommittee investigation of international communications by wire and radio.

Sponsored by Chairman Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana, and Senators McFarland (Democrat) of Arizona, and White (Republican) of Maine of the Interstate Commerce Committee, the resolution calls for information on which to base postwar planning.

west of the Bulgarian border.

Skoplje, a center of rail and highway networks, commands the Vardar Valley leading south into the Salonika area of Greece. The German radio, in a broadcast recorded by the British Ministry of Information, predicted today that the Allies would attempt landings soon in the Salonika area.

3 Armies Face Nazis

The spreading resistance in the Balkans found the Germans under Field Marshal Gen. Erwin Rommel faced with three guerilla armies. In addition to Mihailovic's units these included the Partisans of Gen. Josip (Tito) Broz and a resurgent Albanian force which was said to have become active within recent weeks.

A communique of the Yugoslav National Army of Liberation said that Tito's patriots, having apparently routed German units at a strategic railway bridge over the Sava River near Sevnica, were mopping up all Slovenian territory between the river and the Austrian frontier. Tito's men also were engaged in local fighting along the three-way railway network linking Zagreb with the ports of Fiume and Split.

His Partisans also destroyed a section of track and blew up a railway bridge on the Ljubljana-Trieste line.

U. S. "Blunder" Charged

London, Oct. 19 (AP).—An alleged presentation of four United States Liberator bombers to Gen. Draja Mihailovic was condemned as a "blunder" today by leaders of the Yugoslav Liberation movement which has charged the Yugoslav war minister with collaboration with the Axis.

In a statement broadcast yesterday over the Free Yugoslav radio Gen. Josip (Tito) Broz and Dr. Ivan Ribar, head of the Anti-Fascist Council of Yugoslavs, expressed hope that in the future supplies from the United States would be furnished to their own people's liberation army which they have claimed is the only army in Yugoslavia fighting the Germans.

The Yugoslav guerrilla leaders' assumption that the planes were sent to Mihailovic was somewhat of a mystery in London, but it was presumed to have arisen from a report that President Roosevelt had assigned four liberators to the "Yugoslav section of the USAAF."

Senator Caraway First Woman to Sign Bills

Senator Hattie W. Caraway (Democrat) of Arkansas, while serving as president pro tempore of the Senate in the absence of Vice President Wallace, yesterday became the first woman to affix her signature to bills that have passed the House and Senate.

When the four bills she signed yesterday are made law by the President's signature, her name will be found between those of Speaker Sam Rayburn and Franklin D. Roosevelt. The bills were of minor importance, but today she may sign the servicemen's dependency allowance measure.

Overweight Oil Undermines Your Car

Why Lightest grades of oil are made safe for you by changing to Winter OIL-PLATING

Any oil that has been doing its best in your car for a while back, will be badly overweight this Winter. Everything ever said about not being caught with overweight oil goes double today on account of rationing. Your battery has been undercharged, because your car now runs fewer miles per start. Your gasoline has been wasted by the drag of overweight oil. Your engine has been abused because it hasn't been warm steadily enough for ideal lubrication. Your car could approach the end of its rope with any overweight oil apt to become jelly-like. Before Winter causes that, go light.

Whatever you do, change oil for lightness. At the same time though, you can make the whole big change to an OIL-PLATED engine, by getting popular-priced Conoco Nth motor oil—just as light as needed. OIL-PLATING is applied to inner engine surfaces as closely as chrome plating on your bumpers. The "magnet-like" properties of a Conoco Nth synthetic are the basis of OIL-PLATING. No plating would all drain down to the crankcase fast. It can long remain at its topmost point to safeguard the very first starting stroke. And right after that, even the lightest Conoco Nth oil assures an extremely strong normal type of fluid oil film. Oil film and OIL-PLATING are both present to rebuff wear, and that's how your engine can go through a long Winter—and a long War—always using its lightest possible Nth oil economically. Change at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station today. Continental Oil Company

Dread Engine Acid is Fought by OIL-PLATING

Normal combustion always leaves acids inside of your engine when it stops.

Formerly it seldom stood idle long. Soon mileage and speed heated your engine enough to oust acids.

But nowadays rationing may force long rests, while corrosive acids gnaw. To combat corrosion, metals are plated. You combat acid corrosion with your engine OIL-PLATED.

Allies Follow Up Blow at Hanover

Hit at Nazi Transportation After Heavy Blow at German Industrial City

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 19.—The Allies kept up their aerial onslaught today with raids by British fighters and light bombers on Nazi transportation as RAF pilots returning from last night's blow at Hanover reported little fighter opposition.

London had its fourth successive air raid alarm tonight, a brief alert in which some casualties were believed caused by scattered Nazi planes. Antiaircraft guns began blasting furiously immediately the alarm was sounded. It was London's ninth alert this month and fourth in as many nights.

RAF coastal command Beaufighters attacked the German merchant ship Strasburg off the coast of the Netherlands and scored several hits on the vessel, which had been damaged in an earlier attack. A British air ministry communique said one RAF plane was lost in the attack.

Whirlwind bombers kept up their train-busting raids in northern France, knocking out three locomotives and damaging at least a dozen freight trains.

Fourth Blow in 30 Days

The raid on Hanover was the fourth heavy blow against the prize German industrial city in the last 30 days.

The British and Germans exchanged blows Monday night in a small-scale "Battle of the Capitals." Fast Mosquitoes slashed at Berlin for the fourth time this month and a few Nazi fighter-bombers dropped high explosives at five points in London.

BLOOD-PLASMA NEEDED

Plasma is needed overseas. Your blood may save a life. Phone the District Blood Donor Center, District 3300, for an appointment. Do it today.

The Hanover assault ended 10 days of inactivity for the RAF, whose heavy bombers had not been out since October 8, when they hit Hanover at a cost of 31 planes. Last night's raid cost 17.

Knockout Attempts Indicated

By concentrating on Hanover, one of the biggest German rubber centers and an important rail junction, the British indicated they intended to render it useless to the Nazi war effort with much like the tremendous blows that knocked out Hamburg in four-night saturation raids.

Recent attacks on Hanover presumably have been lighter than those delivered at Hamburg, but the city is only about one-third as large as Hamburg. Clouds last night obscured results.

The Germans acknowledged damage to "residentia' quarters."

It was the RAF's seventh raid this month—one more than the American score to date—and RAF bomber losses were raised to 102 for the first 18 days of October. The United States Eighth Air Force thus far has lost 166.

100 Sorties and No Losses

The plywood, twin-engined Mosquitos darted over Berlin for the seventh time since a heavy raid September 3, and also attacked targets in western Germany. It also was disclosed that in one week in September, Mosquitos flew 100 sorties over Germany without losing a plane, and that only one of them was destroyed in September.

Fewer than 15 German planes swept over east Anglia, southern England, and London, meeting heavy antiaircraft fire in their swift incursions over the capital. Two persons were killed in one outlying district. One bomb hit a garage used as headquarters for a warden's post just after nine wardens had left in answer to the call of the sirens.

War Department Rules Against Censor Comment

By the Associated Press

A military censor has no right to add his comment—witty or otherwise—to the mail he examines.

Announcing this, the War Department asked anyone finding remarks added by the censor in mail received from soldiers to report the incident to the Adjutant General, sending along the letter and envelope, "so that the point of origin and the identity of the offending censor may be determined for disciplinary action." The letters will be returned.

"Censorship of communications to and from persons under military jurisdiction," the department said, "is a necessity in wartime to prevent disclosure of information which would give aid and comfort to the enemy.

"The War Department has never intended that privacy of the mail should be invaded beyond this absolute necessity for security."

Hitler, Chiefs Hold Parley on War Situation

By E. C. Daniel
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 19.—Adolf Hitler today held his second grand strategy parley in two weeks, presumably to explore avenues of escape from the consequences of total defeat, as representatives of Germany's three strongest enemies gathered in Moscow to plot the liquidation of his empire.

A communique from the Nazi Fuehrer's headquarters announced that Hitler and other speakers who were not identified addressed a meeting of the highest political and military authorities of Germany called together by the chief of the high command of the armed forces, Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Keitel.

The character of the meeting suggested that all the Reich's service chiefs were engaged in a complete overhauling of German strategy to meet the multiple threat posed by the Russian summer offensive, the Allied invasion of Italy, the still mounting Allied air attack from the west and the changing attitude of neutrals as reflected in Portugal's release of its Azores bases to the British and Spain's new neutrality.

Presumably since political as well as military leaders were present, the two groups exchanged ideas on methods to keep both the home and the fighting fronts intact through the winter and into the spring, a season which is expected to bring the heaviest of all military blows against Hitler's shrinking European fortress.

The communique reported that "speeches of an ideological or inner political nature" were made by "leading personages of the state and party" and added that Hitler spoke "on the political and military situation."

This latest conference was preceded on October 8 by the biggest Nazi home front pep talk of the war when Hitler and his home front chiefs, Heinrich Himmler, Dr. Robert Ley and Dr. Albert Speer, issued statements exhorting the Germans to greater productive effort and threatening death to defeatists.

The grand strategy conference today followed reports from Spanish correspondents in Berlin that "military and political optimists" were dwindling in Germany and that "technical optimists"—those who place their faith in German victory in new antiblitz weapons—now are the most numerous.

Let's be sensible! It's the race between limited supplies and unlimited demand that shoots prices up. That's why it is necessary to have O.P.A. Price Ceilings. That's why everyone—dealer and public alike—must live up to them.

This is all the more important in the case of whiskey. For no whiskey is now being distilled. The five Park & Tilford Distilleries . . . and all other distilleries in the United States . . . are producing war-alcohol exclusively.

To keep you reasonably supplied, we are using our reserves of quality whiskey. Naturally these reserves must be judiciously apportioned. And so, on occasions, you may find your dealer temporarily short of Park & Tilford Whiskies.

Republicans Join to Fight Higher Taxes

such a levy might be applied. The study was dated October 12.

Representative Robertson said flatly "we can't write a tax bill that will be worthy of the Congress in this grave emergency without their (the Republicans') support." He indicated he would continue to press for a sales tax as being preferable to a "hidden gross income tax" which would result from uncontrolled inflation.

Among witnesses on its last full day of public hearings, the committee heard Representative Monroney (Democrat) of Oklahoma, urge adoption of a 10 per cent sales tax on all spending over a basic individual and family exemption, with rent exempted from the levy. He suggested a $100-a-month cost-of-living exemption for man and wife, with extra for children. The committee today is slated to start its secret sessions on whether to write a tax bill, and what kind.

The Republican stand was defined in separate statements by House Republican Leader Martin of Massachusetts, and by Representative Knutson, of Minnesota, ranking Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee, who said he was speaking on behalf of his nine Republican colleagues on the committee.

In a sharp demand for Government economies before increased taxes, Representative Martin said that "I certainly will not agree to burdening them (the taxpayers) with additional personal income taxes at this time.

"We must put our financial house in order before asking more oppressive personal taxes from the American people.

Economy Demanded

"I join with the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee in demanding economy before new and higher taxes are demanded of the people."

Attacking what he termed the "happy-go-luc'y-spenders" of the Administration, Martin declared:

"We must curb wastefulness in the war effort just as much as in the regular departments."

He said the Administration would continue "to demand more of the taxpayers' money for every project to which they can give a plausible explanation."

"With the whole world as their playground, it is evident the people will be unable to keep pace with these "happy-go-lucky spenders."

End of Ability to Pay

"The people of this country are reaching the end of their ability to assume new tax obligations, . . ." he said.

Both Martin and the Ways and Means Republicans echoed a concern voiced during the summer by Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee, that new increases in taxes would seriously threaten the middle class.

Knutson Asks Action

"We believe," Knutson declared, "that a further increase in taxation at this time would threaten the future solvency of American business and bring about the liquidation of ithe middle class, which has always been the backbone of our country."

He demanded that President Roosevelt act to economize in government, and in military expenditures, The President, said Knutson, should promptly discharge the 300,000 Government employes which Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia, chairman of the Joint Capital Economy Committee and a members of the Finance Committee, had said could be trimmed from the payroll without harming the war effort.

McIntyre Sees Japs Lasting to 1946

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, Surgeon General of the U. S. Navy and personal physician to President Roosevelt, said today the Allies would be fortunate to defeat Japan within three years.

"I think we can make the Germans fold up, but I don't think we can make the Japanese fold up; we've simply got to crush them," he told a luncheon.

President Won't Relax Insistence on Subsidies

dent of the National Farmers Union, lined up with the President.

Patton left the White House meeting ahead of the others and handed out a statement accusing them of forming an "unholy coalition" to nullify the Economic Stabilization Act. He leveled the charges against O'Neal, Albert S. Goss, master of the National Grange, and Ezra T. Benson, executive secretary of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives.

"A year's campaign to nullify the Economic Stabilization Act is on the verge of success," Pattno said. "An unholy colaition of spokesmen for big agriculture, processors, distributors, and the United State Chamber of Commerce has worked without letup to this end."

He said some Congressmen, whom he preferred not to name, were also in the coalition. This group, he declared, is opposed to wage adjustments to meet higher living costs and some of its members are in favor fo a 10 per cent sales tax which he described as a "straight wage cut for low income farmers and wage earners."

The four farm leaders have been appearing frequently at the White House together and earlier in the autumn seemed in virtual agreement on price supports to farmers and a conservative use of subsidies to make up the difference between OPA price ceilings and increased farm prices to cover the cost of production.

Sentiment against subsidies has been growing in Congress since the recess, however, and particularly since the Administration insisted on subsidizing dairy farmers rather than permit an increase in the retail price of milk. Subsidy opponents in both the House and Senate have declared they now can pass a subsidy prohibition law over the President's veto—something they could not do in June, when the same idea was vetoed.

O'Neal, Goss, and Benson were in a long conference with War Food Administrator Marvin Jones at the Department of Agriculture late yesterday—with compromise apparently the desire on both sides, Jones, who is well liked in Congress, believes it is too late to consider changing price control programs during the war and that differences over "the method used should be forgotten if the 1944 food production program is not to suffer materially.

President Roosevelt pointed out farm income has advanced from 9½ billion dollars in 1942 to a probable 12½ billion this year.

He said a campaign soon would be started to get everybody in the country to raise some food in 1944 and that the Victory Garden program would be doubled. Farm production is up 31 per cent from the five-year average preceding the war, he said, and going still higher with many more acres in production next year.

The cost-of-living index is not as low as it should be, he said, but it has come down considerably as a result of subsidy and other price-control programs. There is no reason why the scheme now being tried out should be changed, he declared, and said he was thinking of the housewife's food budget as it would be next July.

Patton declared the "working farmers" would much rather have known prices written into standard war food production agreements than to gamble for higher and higher prices "leading to a collapse such as threw one million farmers off their farms after World War I."

Dates Announced For Brown Stamps

Four sets of brown stamps in War Ration Book 3 will become valid for the purchase of meats and fats on the following dates, OPA announced yesterday:

"G" stamps on October 24, "H" on October 31, "J" on November 7, "K" on November 14. All will expire on December 4.

North Africa Food to Aid France

Commenting on food shipments to North Africa for military purposes, President Roosevelt yesterday noted striking differences before and after the end of the Tunisian campaign and asserted that French authorities had begun to accumulate food for use during and after the liberation of France.

He told a news conference that he could not say when that would be.

Since July, North Africa has been self-sustaining with respect to food and no imports have been received, Mr. Roosevelt said.

He spoke of how the area had been bled white of nearly all wheat and fruits in 1941 and 1942 and that on his visit there last January he had found there was not enough to eat and production was going down hill. Now that situation has changed, he said, and North Africa even supplies sizable quantities for American and British troops.

"Beyond these immediate military objectives," he said in a statement," the French authorities in close collaboration with the combined food board have also begun to accumulate food supplies for use during and after the liberation of France. The success of this program will reduce the future needs of France for American food and shipping resources.

"The 1944 harvests in North Africa, aided by mounting American agricultural equipment and a year of peaceful cultivation, should ease the strain on the United States still further."

Twenty or more U. S. built locomotives used by American troops abroad in World War I are now seeing service in North Africa.

MAJOR ELIOT sees the war with the eyes of the men who plan it . . . knows the vast mechanics of triumph and defeat. Military Expert of CBS, and the New York Herald Tribune Syndicate—he is President of the Association of Radio Analysts. He fought in World War I's bitter, tragic Dardanelles Campaign . . . at Arras, Amiens, Passchendaele.

Millions rely on his radio talks for the blunt truth behind the battle-headlines. We asked him to tell you what he thinks of the new Saturday Evening Post—and Major Eliot says:

"Your magazine is doing what I consider an essential job on the home front today. Your war articles give the people the very sound and smell of battle . . . as our men are fighting it. You've captured the spirit of the young America that's determined to win. I read the Post religiously . . . and learn a great deal from it. And I thoroughly enjoy it."

1. BURMA BOMBER
by Pete Martin

"HERE'S a vivid action story from a vital war front which—thanks to men like its hero—we should soon see flaming into action. Martin describes Captain Johnston as a 'grinning, 6-foot slice of Texas,' who flew on 48 bombing missions through the fierce heat of Burma . . . and the wild monsoons that slapped his B-25 around like a ping-pong ball. His friends are in the story, too—such as Walter Amulunke, with a 'chest like a railroad tank car'. This has battle in it . . . the sound of men's wrath and laughter. It gave me the feeling of being there in Burma with our fighting young flyers."

2. WE MUST SAVE FREE ENTERPRISE
by Henry A. Wallace

"THOSE who think of the Vice-President as an enemy of business have a surprise in store for them when they read this. Here Wallace warns radicals, who would do away with the capitalistic system, that you do not cure a headache by cutting off your head. He champions the small business man, while putting the problem of postwar employment squarely up to industry. Whether we agree with a man or not, most of us will listen when he talks intelligently about something of urgent importance. This article, I believe, will be read, discussed and argued over by millions."

3. AVALANCHE
by Kay Boyle

"THIS thrilling new serial comes from the pen of a distinguished woman writer—and is laid in tragic, defeated France. I always enjoy a story that begins on a train as this does—a blacked-out train traveling to Mont Blanc. In the compartment with the beautiful Fenton Ravel is a mysterious Swiss . . . and a personable young Frenchman whom I suspect Fenton falls in love with. The writer, who has lived in France, brilliantly pictures the tenseness, the strange, suspicious silence in that country today. I shall eagerly look forward to each installment of 'Avalanche'."

Resolution to Pass, Connally Predicts

Committee to Report Compromise Draft After Move to Add Teeth Is Rejected

Chairman Tom Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee predicted last night that his compromise foreign policy declaration will be reported to the Senate without change tomorrow, and will win Senate approval by more than a two thirds vote.

Connally's confident forcast followed a last uncompromising drive by a bipartisan group of Senators to insert teeth in the declaration.

The Foreign Relations Committee, heavily weighted in favor of a compromise, heard the bipartisan plea and then voted to cut off further hearings.

Churchmen at Meeting

In telegrams to Chairman Connally, Catholic, Jewish and Protestant sponsors of a strong joint declaration on world peace meanwhile requested permission to be heard.

Connally advised the three groups last night that the commitee already had voted against public hearings, but would be glad to receive written statements from each of the groups.

The telegrams to the committee were signed by Rabbi Israel Goldstein, president of the Synagogue Council of America; Msgr. John A. Ryan, director of the social action department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, and Dr. Walter Van Kirk, secretary of the Federal Council of Churches.

Msgr. Ryan in his telegram stressed point 5 of the seven-point "Pattern for Peace" program recently concurred in by the three religious groups.

Much more strongly worded and specific than the subcommittee compromise, the fifth point urged by the three religious denominations provides:

"An enduring peace requires the organization of international institutions which will develop a body of international law; guarantee the faithful fulfillment of international obligations, and revise them when necessary; assure collective security by drastic limitation and continuing control of armaments, compulsory arbitration and adjudication of controversies, and the use when necessary of adequate sanctions to enforce the law."

Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida meanwhile moved to amend the compromise to include the three-root provisions of the Ball-Burton-Hatch-Hill resolution—an international organization for peaceful settlement of disputes, use of military force if necessary to suppress aggression, and a provision that the United Nations be the basis of the new world peace machinery.

Pepper's amendment was pending when the committee recessed, and on it the committee showdown will turn. At least four committee Democrats were said to favor the strengthening language, but lea'ers were so certain they had the ballots to pass the compromise through the committee and the Senate overwhelmingly that they pulled out all stops to speed the bill to the floor.

Other Senators Try

With equal determination, Senators Ball of Minnesota, and Burton of Ohio (Republicans), and Hatch of New Mexico, and Hill of Alabama (Democrats), yesterday threw everything they had at the subcommittee compromise in the brief executive hearings.

They told the committee that the general wording of the compromise might pave the way for a "power alliance" instead of a democratic organization of nations pledged to avert war by peaceful methods if possible, but by force if necessary. They argued that a treaty-ratifying two-thirds vote for the compromise would mean nothing in reassurance to our allies unless the Senate says in plain English what United States postwar intentions are.

The bipartisan Senators will hold another strategy conference this morning in the office of Senator Ball. Senate leaders, anxious to pass a resolution with a minimum of controversy and the biggest possible vote, have not abandoned hopes of dissuading the B-2 H-2 group from carrying their fight to the floor.

Chairman Connally told reporters that about all that was accomplished at yesterday's meeting "was that they smoked up my cigars."

"It is my view that the full committee will approve the resolution by a substantial majority when it votes, without amendment," said Connally. "It is my further view that the Senate will pass it by a substantial majority, probably by more than a two-thirds vote."

Christie, on Stand, Denies Leaving Estate During Night of Sir Harry Oakes' Murder

De Marigny's Lawyer Subjects Witness to Stern Questioning

By the Associated Press

Nassau, Bahamas, Oct. 19.—Harold George Christie, the house guest who discovered aged Sir Harry Oakes' burned and beaten body last July, swore today he knew nothing of the murder until he went to awaken the gold mining tycoon for breakfast.

He denied that he left the Oakes estate, Westbourne, during the night.

Handsome Alfred de Marigny, Sir Harry's son-in-law, who is on trial for the murder, smiled and nodded his head occasionally as Chief Defense Counsel Godfrey Higgs subjected the witness to a stern cross-examination.

"You knew nothing of events until you entered Sir Harry's room and found his body?" Higgs inquired.

Knew Nothing, He Asserts

"I knew nothing," came back Christie in a clear, calm voice.

The real estate dealer, who described Sir Harry as "one of my closest friends," was just as emphatic in his reply to a suggestion that he might have left the etsate during the night. Higgs referred to a statement by Capt. Edward Sears of the Nassau police, revealed for the first time by Prosecutor A. F. Adderley yesterday, that he had seen a man he took to be Christie in a station-wagon going away from Westbourne during that fatal night.

"I did not leave Westbourne anytime that night," Christie declared.

"What would you say if Captain Sears said he saw you out that night?"

"I would say he was very seriously mistaken and should be more careful of his observations."

The first climax of the trial came during the cross-examination, and the jammed courtroom was tense, because Adderley had stressed the Sears' statement, which was made to the prosecution during the investigation. Anticipating an attack on Christie's testimony as a result, Adderley had put the point before the jury.

Question of Honor

"It will be a question of Christies' honor," Adderley had said, "and in no way will impeach the evidence of the Crown against the accused."

During Christie's lengthy recital, jurors turned their eyes occasionally to watch the poker-faced De Marigny, who propped his feet against the bars of the dock and fastened his gaze upon Christie. The 35-year-old defendant was thin-faced, the result of an attack of influenza while he waited in prison for the trial to begin.

He wore a gray suit, a blue shirt and a maroon tie, one of three given to him by his faithful wife Nancy, Sir Harry's eldest daughter, especially for his appearances at the trial.

Christie told of the events of July 7 and 8.

After arranging for Sir Harry to leave July 9 on a planned trip to the United States, Christie said, the two men went to Westbourne for a game of tennis with friends.

Later they had highballs, dined and played Chinese checkers with friends until about 11 p. m., the witness continued. When the friends left he and Oakes went upstairs to the latter's bedroom.

There they talked of their plans for the next day, and Christie a few minutes later said goodnight and went to his room—removed from Oakes' chamber by another bedroom and a bath.

Soon asleep, Christie added, he was awakened twice, once by mosquitoes and again by a severe tropical thunderstorm. He did not tell of hearing any unusual noises during the night from Sir Harry's room.

Christie said he awakened again after the sun was up, and went out on a balcony where he and Sir Harry usually had breakfast together. Not finding his friend, he went to his door to call him.

"I called "Hi, Harry!" " Christie said. "There was no answer and I entered the room. Then I saw that the mosquito bar had been burned and I rushed to the bed. I lifted Harry's head.

"I was greatly shocked. It is hard to describe the feeling."

Under questioning, Christie said he did not recall whether he had left the house to summon help. "It is possible," he replied, "but if I did I don't remember it."

Salesman Admits Bribe Guilt

Charles E. Kerpen of New York, a salesman of automobile tire casings and tire patches, pleaded guilty in District Court yesterday to giving a bribe to a War Production Board official in an attempt to disssuade him from bringing charges of violations of WPB rules.

Justice Edward C. Eicher sent the case to the probation officer. Maximum penalty is 3 years in jail and a fine not to exceed thrice the bribe.

Kerpen was arrested July 1 in Union Station by agents of the FBI a few minutes after the bribe, contained in an envelope, was given to Seymour Martin, WPB investigator. FBI said the bribe was $2000, and that it was given so that Martin would not disclose to his superiors information as to irregularities in the sale of reclaimed rubber by Kerpen. Martin previously had informed the FBI that the bribe would be offered him.

When indicted in August, Kerpen entered a plea of innocent upon arraignment, but changed it yesterday.

4 District Area Men Missing; Nazis Hold 2

Four Washington area men were listed as missing in action and two previously reported as missing were announced as prisoners of war yesterday by the War Department.

Missing in action are Lieut. Richard E. Rozzelle, 1368 Euclid st. nw.; Pvt. Ronald L. Taylor, 4309 Kansas ave. nw., Sergt. Walter H. Sword, Brentwood, Md., and Pvt. Andrew J. Preston of Alexandria, Va.

ROZZELLE

Now reported as prisoners of war are Lieut. Murray E. Dulberger, 1445 Ogden st. nw., and Staff Sergt. Joseph D. Hopkins, Arlington, Va.

Lieutenant Rozzelle was reported missing in action over southern France on August 19. He is a graduate of Central High School. While attending High Point College, N. He received his wings at Lubbock Field, Tex., after training at fields in Oklahoma, Idaho, Kansas and Florida. Since going overseas last January, Lieutenant Rozzelle, a pilot, has been awarded the Air Medal and the Oak Leaf Cluster for having completed 24 missions over enemy territory.

TAYLOR

Private Taylor, 30, has been missing in action in Sicily since August 12, according to information received by his wife, Mrs. Delene M. Taylor, a clerk at the main postoffice. An infantry soldier, Taylor was trained at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.; Camp Walters, Tex., and Fort Meade, Md. Before entering the Army he was employed by an oil company and managed a restaurant in Wichita, Kan.

Staff Sergeant Sword, missing in action in the European area, is the son of Mrs. Gusia O. Sword, 3702 Windom rd., Brentwood.

Private Preston, whose wife's address was given as Naval Station Shop 18, Alexandria, is missing in the North African area.

Now listed as a prisoner of war interned in Germany, Lieutenant Dulberger, 25, has been missing over enemy territory since August 17. A copilot on a B-17 bomber, he went overseas last May after being trained at Randolph Field, Tex., where he received his wings.

Also a prisoner of war in Germany, Staff Sergeant Hopkins, is the son of Mrs. Pearl Hopkins, whose address was given as 821 South Dinwiddie st., Arlington.

Standardized Truck Equipment Favored

Chicago, Oct. 19 (AP).—Standardization of motor truck equipment so parts would be interchangeable was recommended today by Ted V. Rodgers, president of the American Trucking Associations.

"The standardization of equipment does not of necessity imply that each vehicle must be like the other in all details," asserted Rodgers in his annual report prepared for the association's convention. "It could, however, extend at least to a point where the same power unit could haul any tractor in a given area of realtively uniform geographical characteristics."

Short Navy Leaves Laid To Quota Lag

Because inductions of men into the Navy have been lagging behind schedule, that branch of the service has been unable to allow its inductees more than a week's time to arrange their affairs prior to entering service, it was learned yesterday.

The Army has been allowing its men three weeks' furlough after being accepted at an induction center, and the Marine Corps has been allowing two weeks, compared with the Navy's seven days.

Selective Service has asked the Navy to gradually increase the leave-time until it gets on a par with the Army's practice, but the Navy has declined to do so on the ground that such a move would cost the service two weeks' quota of manpower at a time when it cannot be spared.

It is presumed that the Navy will increase the length of furlough once it catches up with its quotas.

The question of the amount of time allowed to arrange one's affairs has become an important problem as more and more family men are inducted. There have been reports recently that men with families which must be moved to the homes of relatives out of town have been denied additional time by the Navy to make the transition.

Informed officials state that the problem originates because Navy physical standards are substantially higher than the Army's.

Thus, out of 300 men found physically fit at an induction center, a total of 150 may be found fit for the Navy, with the rest acceptable to the Army. Assuming that the Navy's quota is 100, and the Army's quota 200, the Navy would have to share the top quality men with the Army on a pro-rata basis, permitting the Army to accept up to 100 of them, leaving only 50 to the Navy, thus putting the Navy behind its quota and necessitating the shorter furloughs.

In practice, the Navy representatives have been fighting vigorously at induction stations to get hold of all possible inductees who meet their requirements, with the result that some inductees who express a preference for the Army may be compelled to serve in the Navy, while some men who express a preference for the Navy may be assigned to the Army.

Japanese Pass Salween River In China Drive

By the Associated Press

Chungking, Oct. 19.—One prong of the Japanese drive into southwestern China has been thrust eastward across the Salween River, which for 18 months has held the enemy in check, a communique from American headquarters indicated today.

The communique recorded an attack by fighter-bombers of the Fourteenth U. S. Air Force, supporting Chinese ground forces, on Japanese troop concentrations and supply dumps at Luku, in Yunnan Province, on the east bank of the Salween, well north of the point where the old Burma Road crosses that barrier.

It was the first indication that the Japanese had established a bridgehead. The Chinese have not acknowledged the loss of Luku or any Japanese crossing of the river.

The American air attack, made Sunday, inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy, the communique said. It also reported three Japanese air attack on three undefended auxiliary air fields in eastern China.

(U. S. Tenth Air Force planes ranging over north Burma in the last few days have destroyed Japanese supply points and bases, disrupted communications and denied "use of north Burma air bases to the enemy," a communique today from the American headquarters in New Delhi, India, announced.

(Mitchell bombers pounded the airfield at Myitkyina yesterday "with excellent results," destroying about one-third of the runway, it added.)

Other American planes bombed three undefended enemy auxiliary airfields in eastern China, the announcement said.

Foes Objective Won

Although the Chinese said yesterday they had defeated and dispersed a Japanese column which had reached the Salween opposite Luku, General Stilwell's communique indicated the Japanese had accomplished their objective of pushing the Chinese, at least in this sector, back across the river.

Chungking military men had said the Japanese aim in their three-pronged drive was to forestall any possible Chinese move into Burma to aid an Allied offensive from India in the capture of the strategic north Burma stronghold of Miytkina.

Rev. Joseph Myer, Laurel Priest, Dies

Baltimore, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Rev. Joseph A. Myer, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church at Laurel for 32 years, died today at Mercy Hospital after a long illness. He was 71.

Father Myer was born in Harford County, the son of the late Charles and Margaret J. Myer. He trained for the priest hood at St. Charles College, then located near Ellicott City, and was ordained in 1903 at St. Mary's Seminary, in Baltimore, by Cardinal Gibbons.

Father Myer served pastorates at St. Mary's Church, Newport, Charles County, and the Church of the Holy Ghost in the same county before going to Laurel.

Revised House Bill Would Induct Childless Men First, on National Basis

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A House subcommittee yesterday filed with the full House Military Affairs Committee a revised fathers draft bill stipulating that nonfathers be called ahead of fathers on a national basis.

Effect of the provision, a throwback to the House-passed Kilday principle of nonfathers first, would be to bind Selective Service by law to see to it that fathers were not called in one State, when childless men are available for service in another.

Representative John M. Costello (Democrat) of California, chairman of the bill-drafting subcommittee, said the new bill also would provide statutory enforcement of the State quota principle. In other words, fathers could not be called in some counties in a State when nonfathers were available in other counties.

Chairman Andrew J. May of the House Military Committee predicted the subcommittee recommendation will be approved by the full committee probably today, and the completed fathers' draft bill hurried to the House floor later this week.

"I have no doubt," Chairman May told reporters, "that if inductions are required on a national basis as prescribed in the bill, there would be no need to call fathers for another 30 days, possibly another 60."

Costello said he was not certain whether the provision would materially defer induction of fathers "since Selective Service says it is already calling men on a national basis. This will require them by law to do so. Whatever the effect, it will not change the number of fathers (446,000) which will be needed by the armed forces by the end of the year."

The fathers' draft bill which passed the Senate nearly two weeks ago provided that pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, who have a child or children under 18, be inducted after undeferred nonfathers, but made this qualification: "To the fullest extent determined by the director of Selective Service to be administratively practicable."

The House subcommittee struck out the qualifying language over the opposition of Selective Service. Selective Service officials have contended it will never be administratively possible to draft "the last nonfather" ahead of fathers, since many nonfathers have appeals pending and cannot be touched until they are settled. There is also a time-lag in reports from the States on available nonfathers and orders for their induction which Selective Service says makes induction of some fathers ahead of schedule to meet armed force requisitions inevitable.

Members of the subcommittee said rare exceptions to the nonfathers first principle might be met by language in their amendment requiring calling up of childless men first "under such rules and regulations as the Director of Selective Service shall prescribe."

Physicals for 4F's

Completely eliminated from the fathers' draft bill by the House subcommittee was the Senate's Bailey amendment requirement that only those eligible nonfathers certified as "indispensable" by the employers in industry and Government be freed from the draft. House subcommitteemen contend this is no improvement on present practice of taking only those men whose department heads cannot be replaced.

Retained in the bill was the Senate provision for a five-man medical commission of qualified physicians to review physical standards now set by the armed branches, with a view to induction of more 4-F's. Also retained was the Senate requirement that Selective Service boards of appeals having jurisdiction over the area in which a man works must pass on deferments granted by local boards.

"Since I lost my 'legs' I've sure been hopping!"

I'M YOUR service-station operator. There was a time when I used to take things fairly easy around here.

Had a couple of young fellows to do the leg work—fellows who not only could step lively, but did. I used to let them gas the cars, while I did the managing.

Those young fellows are gone to war, now. And handling the job myself sure keeps me hopping!

You take last week. I lubricated 35 cars for folks around here. War workers, some of 'em. A couple of doctors. Red Cross people. Farmers that had brought stuff in to market. People who gotta keep their cars running.

Of course my gas business is down...on account of rationing. But that's O.K....I figure that's part of my contribution to Victory. And I can still get by, giving you car owners tip-top service . . . helping you keep your cars running for the duration. I figure I'm a lot of help around this community and when you take all the thousands of fellows like me, the work we are doing really keeps things moving on the Home Front.

So—I'm going along, doing my best, and when this War's over I'll be right here same as always, ready to help you enjoy the good days Peace will bring.

three Allied diplomats an opportunity to tell one another "frankly and freely what's on one another's mind."

Early in the day, Eden went to Spaso House, official residence of the United States Ambassador, where Hull is staying, and talked with the Secretary of State. Later Molotov returned Hull's call of last night. Then the three got down to work at 6 p. m.

No Prepared Agenda

An American spokesman said Hull had no agenda prepared in advance of his coming to Moscow and that topics would form as the discussions went forward.

Much of the important groundwork will be laid here for future important conversations among United Nations leaders which are expected to be far reaching in scope.

(Prime Minister Churchill has said that it is hoped a Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin meeting can be held before the end of the year.)

All newspapers carried large front-page pictures of Hull, Eden and Molotov at the airport, and Muscovites stood in long lines to buy them.

The foreign secretaries are believed to be discussing not only wartime but postwar matters of a military, political and economic nature.

Serene Parley Expected

There was a full realization in the American and British delegations that the Soviets do not expect to discuss the borders of the Soviet Union and the status of the Baltic States.

Said one of the Americans: "I am sure we all understand one another and I know success will result from this conference. We are going to get along fine. Mr. Hull and Mr. Eden know and respect Mr. Molotov and they will work splendidly together."

Also there were many indications that the Soviets were welcoming Hull and Eden with friendship and warmth and that they are as determined as the Americans and British to make a success of the meetings.

Everywhere in Moscow the conference was the chief subject of conversation. The Russian people were quick to display appreciation of the fact that Hull, highest United States official ever to visit Moscow, considered the meeting of such importance that at the age of 72 he flew halfway around the world on his first plane ride to reach the Russian capital.

Hull Rested at Cairo

Cairo, Oct. 16 (Delayed) (AP).—Secretary of State Hull, wearied by a nightlong plane trip, spent a full day resting here before resuming his trip to Moscow.

Hull was a guest of American Minister Alexander Kirk in Cairo and saw no visitors. He took his meals in his room and left the house only long enough to sign the visitors' book in the King's palace and take a quick look at the Pyramids.

ploy the whole weight of the available air power against selective areas in turn; such concentrated use of the air striking force is battle winning factor of the first importance.

"Control of available air power must be centralized and command must be exercised through the air force commander if this inherent flexibility and ability to deliver the decisive blow are to be fully exploited. Therefore, the command of air and ground forces in a single theater of operation will be vested in the superior commander charged with the actual conduct of operations in the theater who will exercise command of air forces through the air force commander and command of ground forces through the ground force commander.

"The superior commander will not attach army air forces to units of the grounds forces under his command except when such ground force units are operating independently or are isolated by distance or lack of communication."

Steinbeck Tells of Luigi, the Worried Bartender of Capri, and His Daughter

By John Steinbeck

Somewhere in the Mediterranean War Theater.—When our small American force had captured the Island of Capri with no resistance whatsoever on their part or on ours, it was only natural that sooner or later we should meet Luigi the bartender. Luigi had kept warm during the whole war a love of Americans based, he freely admitted, on a memory of tips in the nicer days when American tourists came to bathe in the Blue Grotto and the pink wine.

When sailors and officers from the little force inspected the defenses of Luigi's bar and found them formidable, Luigi was cordial but sad. He spoke the English we know, the English of the banana pushcarts and the pizzerias, of the spaghetti joints and grind organs. Luigi's dialect sounded like home.

Luigi was gay but sad. His joy had a habit of falling off in the middle and dissipating. One afternoon, after each one of us had tried to remember a man named Giuseppi Marinari, of Gary, Ind., who was Luigi's third cousin, we inquired into his sadness. And only then did his trouble come out with a rush.

Why Luigi Was Sorrowful

It seemed that Luigi had a daughter and, more than that, he had an incipient grandchild. But this daughter and this expectation were across the little stretch of water in Castellemare. And, what was worse, the Germans were moving up on Castellemare and we were not there in enough force either to repel or to intercept them.

Consequently it seemed that Luigi's daughter was very likely to have her child in a shell hole, illuminated by star shells and parachute flares and possibly speeded up by bomb bursts. Luigi was worried and upset because, he explained, it was not as though he had other daughters or grandchildren. This was his sole chick, due to some misfortune or deformity, the reason for which was known only to God.

And as Luigi poured out his story he also poured out Scotch whisky that had been buried in the earth in back of his bar ever since the war started.

Group Worries With Bartender

Going back to the ship, the little group could not lose the sadness that Luigi had planted in it. "How would you like it to happen to your family?" Lieutenant Blank said. "Why, you can look across to Castellemare."

On this basis the group visited the commodore in the ward room of his flagship. They told their story and the commodore looked gravely over his coffee cup at them. And his very calm blue eyes got bright with amusement. "What do you want me to do," he asked, "attack Castellemare?"

"No, sir," said Lieutenant Blank.

"But we have six captured Italian M. S. boats. How would it be if we took one of them and just went over and got her? It would only take an hour or less."

"And suppose you lost the boat and got yourself killed?"

"We wouldn't do that, sir. We would just run over and get her. We could do it in practically a few minutes."

Boys Get Their Orders

The commodore said, "I can't permit it. The thing is out of the question. The thing is silly. We're trying to run a war, not a maternity hospital. And besides I have work for you to do. You can't go running about like this."

"Yes, sir," said Lieutenant Blank.

"These are your orders," said the commodore. "You are to take one of the M. S. boats and patrol the coast of the mainland, particularly in the area about Castellemare. You will report the presence of any German shipping there and if you see any hostile craft you will report it and engage it. It may be necessary for you to go pretty far inshore to carry out those orders. Do you understand?"

"Yes, sir," said Lieutenant Blank, "but I sure wish we could have got that girl off."

"This is no time for sentiment," the commodore said.

Job Done Quickly

The thing was very quick. It required only to pull up to the little dock at the little town and to ask for Luigi's daughter. In ten minutes she was at the dock carrying a bundle of clothing and, in our estimation, she was a little closer than even Luigi suspected. And then the Issota-Fraschini engines of the M. S. boat purred and the white wake spread away from the boat and she cut through the water back to Capri, for M. S. boats do not ride on top of the water, they knife through it.

The rest was very silly. Luigi was at the waterfront and he cried and his daughter cried and about a thousand Caprianos cried and the sound of kissing was deafening and a lot of sailors looked gruff and a kind of triumphant procession went up the hill on the funicular railway and there was something in the nature of a party at Luigi's bar.

Luigi There With Scotch

The child, no matter what its sex, is going to have Lieutenant Blank's first name, and not only Luigi but all Luigi's relatives are going to remember all of us in their prayers for hundreds of years to come.

So much for the assurances. But the next morning a party of five went up on the hill to get haircuts. We were sitting reading copies of "The London Pictorial" for 1937 and waiting for the one barber chair to be vacant when in the doorway Luigi appeared. And Luigi carried a little tray and on the tray was a Scotch and soda for each of us. And later in the day we went shopping and wherever we stopped to look and to buy there Luigi appeared with his little tray.

It was a pretty nice day.

Season cavity in hearts, fill with stuffing, and fasten with skewers. Roll in flour and brown quickly in hot lard, in a heavy kettle. Add a small amount of water. Julia says—

Let the Children Cook

LAST MONTH, in one of these columns, I talked about the way youngsters like to put up their own school lunches. And, to tell the truth, I was amazed at the number of readers—both young and old—who wrote me afterward. Almost everyone was quick to point out that the younger generation not only likes to pack lunches, but also gets real satisfaction from various kinds of practical cooking.

More than one reader added this very timely thought: nowadays, when so many mothers are busy with war work, it's a real family help when the children take an active part in making the kitchen run smoothly. It gives them the feeling of "doing something" important, too.

I've found through my own experience that youngsters make creditable cooks provided they're not hurried and provided they start out on things they really like.

And these are a "natural" for girls to start out on:

BONNIE DEE COOKIES

2 cups enriched flour
½ tsp. soda
1 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
2 cups quick oats
1 cup seedless raisins
1 cup coarsely chopped nutmeats
¾ cup shortening
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs
⅓ cup milk

Sift flour, measure and sift with dry ingredients; add oats, raisins and nut meats. Cream shortening with sugar; add well-beaten eggs and milk; combine with flour mixture. Drop by teaspoonfuls on greased cookie sheet. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) 12 to 15 min. Makes 6 dozen.

One of the best things for boys to try their kitchen skill on is waffles and pancakes—but warn them not to "peek" while baking waffles, and not to turn pancakes until they are fairly full of bubble holes on top.

MYSTERY OF THE MISSING SOMETHING

THIS LOOKS LIKE COFFEE—IT SMELLS LIKE COFFEE—IT TASTES LIKE COFFEE, BUT SOMETHING SEEMS TO BE MISSING! HOW COME?
I DON'T KNOW, DEAR. JUST BOUGHT IT YESTERDAY, AND I PAID A GOOD DEAL FOR IT.
IT'S THE FUNNIEST THING, JOAN. YESTERDAY I PAID A LOT OF MONEY FOR A POUND OF COFFEE, BUT THIS MORNING MARTIN SIPPED IT AND SAID "SOMETHING SEEMS TO BE MISSING" AND HE DIDN'T MEAN CREAM AND SUGAR, EITHER, BECAUSE HE ALWAYS TAKES HIS COFFEE "STRAIGHT" TO GET THE FULL FLAVOR
I'LL BET MARTIN WOULD GO FOR YOUR COFFEE IF YOU BOUGHT IT IN THE WHOLE-BEAN AND HAD IT GROUND EXACTLY RIGHT FOR YOUR COFFEE MAKER. IN MY EXPERIENCE, THAT'S THE WAY TO GET REAL FLAVOR!
THAT SOUNDS LIKE AN IDEA!
MMM-THIS IS SOMETHING LIKE IT. REAL COFFEE AGAIN—EVEN THOUGH IT COST PLENTY OF MONEY—IT'S WORTH IT.
BUT THIS COFFEE ISN'T EXPENSIVE. I JUST DISCOVERED THAT IN COFFEE, IT IS FRESHNESS THAT COUNTS. SO—I BOUGHT WHOLE-BEAN COFFEE.... HAD IT GROUND WHILE I WAITED... SAY THIS IS GOOD COFFEE!

President Calls Labor Chiefs To Conference on Wage Issue

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

With coal and railroad wage problems still before the Government, President Roosevelt yesterday summoned to the White House for a conference Thursday the combined labor war board, labor sources disclosed.

It was understood that the group which is headed by AFL President William Green and CIO President Philip Murray would voice vigorous objections to present wage-control policies.

Meanwhile, United Mine Worker sources expressed the belief that Appalachian coal operators were objecting to the miners proposed contract with Illinois operators for fear of losing 8½ cents a ton additional profit margin which the miners say was provided when the Office of Price Administration authorized a price increase to pay the cost of operating a six-day week and increased prices for materials.

Earlier, railroad labor representatives in Washington and Chicago indicated that consideration was being given to holding a strike vote under the Railway Labor Act in protest against handling of railroad wages.

It was understood that representatives of 1,100,000 nonoperating railroad workers meeting in Washington have decided to draw up a strike ballot "to see what it looks like."

Representatives of more than 300,000 operating workers who will meet in Chicago Friday indicated to the Associated Press that a strike ballot of their affiliates also was in the picture.

T. C. Cashen, president of the Switchmen's Union of North America, said there was "quite a possibility" that an order for a strike ballot would be issued at the Friday meeting of the five operating brotherhoods.

"Apparently, we cannot get action by any other method," Cashen said. "The matter of a strike ballot is up to the general chairmen. I cannot speak for them, but it is my personal opinion that such an order is quite probable."

The operating unions are said to reveal more readiness to invoke the strike ballot procedure than the nonops.

A recent emergency board decision awarded them a 4-cent-an-hour general wage increase which they termed an "insult." The nonoperating unions were allowed an 8-cent boost by a similar board, but the order was upset by Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson. Last week, the President set up a new board to review the question.

Meanwhile, more miners returned to work in Alabama and Indiana where strikes have been in progress in protest against action by Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes returning the mines to their owners.

A hearing on UMW's proposed contract with Illinois operators is scheduled before the War Labor Board tomorrow—called at the request of Appalachian operators.

The Appalachian operators blasted the pact as inflationary Monday and stated that it would increase the cost of coal to consumers 50 to 60 cents a ton.

It was pointed out in UMW circles that the operators were granted a price increase of 21.32 cents to cover increased costs, but that bituminous coal division figures indicate that costs only increased 12.76 cents between the first three months of 1942 and the first three months of this year, thus providing an extra margin of 8.56 cents.

OPA officials acknowledged that they would take such facts into consideration in making any further adjustment in coal prices. The coal agreement which provides a daily increase of $1.75 a day, part for more work and part for underground travel time, is to go into effect only after OPA grants an appropriate price increase.

The Appalachian operators presented figures which presented a somewhat different picture, indicating that costs have outrun prices in the past year, reducing their per ton profit.

Petworth Citizens Vote Amendment to McCarran D. C. Government Plan

Approving the McCarran District government revision bill in principal, Petworth Citizens Association last night proposed amendment of the plan to allow Congress veto power of the Commissioners' acts only by affirmative action.

Under Senator McCarran's plan, Congress must approve all actions by Commissioners before they go into effect. If they failed to vote, the actions would be vetoed automatically.

The association asked also that a larger number of Commissioners be appointed on a part-time basis and that allowance be made for a correspondingly larger number of wards.

Senes B. Passmore was elected president. Others elected were Damon A. Spencer, first vice president; Thomas R. Manning, second vice president; Raymond E. Gable, secretary; Mrs. Rose Glaser, assistant secretary; Horace J. Phelps, financial secretary; John S. Hamill, treasurer; O. V. Carpenter, sergeant at arms, and Ernest F. Henry and John H. Connaughton, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

A proposal to use District surplus funds to settle outstanding District obligations was recommended.

A resolution opposing the proposed establishment of a night club in the 3000 block of 14th st. nw. near Trinity Towers Apartment House was adopted last night by the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights.

The forum also appointed Sparrell A. Wood chairman of a committee to study the McCarran District government plan and represent it at Senate District Committee hearings.

A nominating slate for the November elections was named as follows: William L. Ford, president; Mrs. C. J. Fernald, first vice president; Mrs. Stewart Updike, second vice president; Mrs. Elizabeth Solzbech, secretary; James W. Cranford, treasurer; William J. Oates, chaplain, and Dr. Lyman F. Kebler and Sparrell A. Wood, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The will of our people can assure a just and durable peace
Today the United Nations are joined in their determination to win a decisive victory. On every battle front and on every farm and in every production centre a singleness of purpose is speeding "unconditional surrender."
Tomorrow millions of soldiers and workers can have steady employment if they also unite with determination to bring about "a just and durable peace."
Prosperity can be realized only through the will of an informed and a united people. With their courage and their determination, the people's will to accomplish a righteous peace is irresistible.

Willkie, GOP Congressmen Talk on Issues

By Howard Flieger
Associated Press Staff Writer

Wendell L. Willkie traded questions and answers on politics and world affairs with Republican members of Congress in a three-hour off-the-record-session last night.

The questions, following a closed-meeting speech, gave both Willkie and the Congressmen a chance to size up each other. The 1940 Republican presidential nominee emerged from the meeting with his necktie awry and his hair tousled to tell reporters:

"I had a wonderful time. It was an enjoyable evening."

Willkie was a guest of the "78th Club," an organization of the 59 freshmen Republican Congressmen, but he spoke to nearly twice that many Representatives since each club member had the privilege of inviting a veteran Republican Congressman as a guest.

Answering questions about next year's Presidential campaign, the Indianan told the Congressmen about the same thing he said in St. Louis last week: That not just any Republican nominee can have his support for the Presidency next year. The candidate must be one who sees the international situation as Willkie sees it.

One of the questions put to him was whether he would surrender any part of United States sovereignty in dealing with other nations.

"He answered that one a long time," said one Congressman, "but I'm not sure what the answe was."

Representative Joseph A. Martin, jr., the House Minority Leader, and Representative Eaton (Republican), New Jersey, ranking minority member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, were among the veteran Congressmen who attended the closed meeting as guests of the "78th Club" members.

Willkie spent the afternoon talking with Republican members of Congress. He had no formal Washington engagements aside from last night's off-the-record address.

While he was meeting with some of the Republican leaders Representative Rankin (Democrat) of Mississippi got up on the floor of the House and told his fellow Democrats they "should not get excited over Wendell Willkie or anything he says or does."

"He is our secret weapon with which we are now breaking up Republican formations behind the lines," he declared. "A few nights ago we turned the big bazooka loose in the Republican china shop in St. Louis, and did he produce results!"

Comptroller Tells of Fraud Peril in Army Authority on Bills

Concluding two days of testimony in opposition to legislation to give the War Department final authority to negotiate settlements of terminated war contracts, Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren told the House Military Committee yesterday that the department regulations "can cover up every fraud in the world."

After hearing the General Accounting Office head complain of lack of power to audit payments under the settlements, the committee adjourned until Thursday, when spokesmen for industry are scheduled to give their views on the War Department-sponsored legislation.

Promises Quick Audit

Warren, who commented Monday that "wining and dining" Army contracting officers had a tendency toward liberality with public funds, told the committee an Accounting Office audit could be made quickly and effectively, and would not interfere with the post-war economic structure.

Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson had testified earlier that delays through accounting office procedure would seriously hamper business needing prompt settlements to unfreeze capital tied up by war contracts.

Warren testified that war powers legislation under which the War Department has proceeded in settling terminated contracts applies also to the Navy, the Maritime Commission and 18 other agencies. Only the War Department, he said, had challenged the propriety of the accounting office inquiring into payments, his assumption being that the other agencies were waiting to see "how the War Department carries the ball."

Payments Could Be Passed

Under existing procedure, he said, payments disallowed by his office on review of going contracts could be approved by Army contracting officers in termination settlements, with no recourse by the Government except in cases of obvious fraud. Yesterday he testified that overpayments amounting to millions of dollars had been halted through examination of going contracts.

"If you want us out of it, just say so," he told the committee. "I think it's your duty to tell us whether you want these things audited or not."

Warren's testimony prompted Representative Cochran (Democrat) of Missouri, chairman of the House Committee on Accounts, to tell Representative May on the House floor that the latter should not stay as chairman of the Military Affairs Committee if the War Department were given the enlarged powers it was asking. He said the powers should be placed "where they belong"—meaning the General Accounting Office. May said later, he did not reply to Cochran because he agreed with him.

British Prisoners Caught in U.S. Raid

Aboard the Exchange Ship Drottningholm, Goeteborg, Sweden, Oct. 18 (Delayed) (AP).—Several British Tommies awaiting repatriation in this neutral port told with evident relish today how they were caught in a raid by American Flying Fortresses and Liberators on Marienburg October 9.

"We were in a work command being escorted to our jobs by a German guard when the planes came over," said George Magee, a soldier from North Ireland. "The Jerries, watching proudly, pointed upward saying: 'Look how strong our Luftwaffe has become.'

"'Man,' one of our boys said, 'that's not the Luftwaffe—those are Liberators.' The words were hardly spoken before the guards were scooting at top speed for the nearest shelter."

Philippine Puppet State Woos Guerillas

The Tokyo radio acknowledged yesterday that "sedition" and "guerilla activities" continued in the Philippines by asserting that the National Assembly of the puppet "Philippine Republic" had voted in Manila to grant an amnesty to anyone engaged in such activities if he swears "to become a good citizen."

The broadcast said the assembly had approved, "by an overwhelming majority," a treaty of alliance with Japan," thus insuring the defense of the Philippines."

Servicemen's Hotel to Open On Wednesday

Additional accommodations for 3300 transient enlisted personnel and officers will become available next Wednesday when the United Nations Service Center will be dedicated at 5 p. m.

Purchased from the Capitol Park Hotel Corp. for $400,000 by the Federal Works Administration, the former hotel will be staffed largely by volunteers, officials of the Recreation Services, Inc., said. Classes for volunteers are being held now.

A $400,000 check was deposited by the FWA at District Court yesterday. Condemnation proceedings were instituted in the court last August at the request of the Department of Justice.

Operated for the War Hospitality Committee, the center is expected to meet urgent lodging requirements for transient service personnel near Union Station. Although accommodations will be low priced, officials believe the center will be self-sustaining.

Open house for recreation workers and officials interested in recreation will be held Tuesday, 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. Congressmen also have been invited.

At the first meeting of the War Recreation Workers Association yesterday in Salvation Army's USO Club, Pennsylvania ave. and 8th st. nw., the following officer were elected:

War Industry Plant Building Tapers Off 15% Monthly

Construction of the Nation's war industry plant—the greatest building job in United States history—is tapering off at the rate of 15 per cent monthly as the program approaches completion.

The monthly construction report by the War Production Board yesterday showed a 20 per cent decrease in construction of raw materials production facilities in August as compared with July.

Construction of ordnance plant facilities declined more than 50 per cent.

Other marked declines in facilities construction, by categories, were: Ammunition and explosives, 61 per cent; machinery and machine tools, 52 per cent; nonferrous metals, 40 per cent; iron and steel, 21 per cent; aircraft, 16 per cent.

Reuse of Containers Urged by WPB Aide

New York, Oct. 18 (AP).—Frank J. Hynes, assistant director of the container division, War Production Board, said today that the production of corrugated paper and wood containers was running behind available supply and urged increased reuse of shipping containers.

At a press conference preceding a meeting with more than 1000 industrial representatives, the first of six regional meetings planned by the division during the next two weeks, Hyms said that one large manufacturer has reused 600,000 corrugated containers and that a mail order house has made 576,000 shipments to retail stores in reused containers in four months.

Wealthy Eat Less, Poor More, British War Diet Survey Shows

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Oct. 19.—In Britain, under a strict ration program, the rich are getting thinner but the poor are eating better, the American Dietetic Assocation was told today.

"For all practical purposes the ration has leveled the diet," said Dr. V. P. Sydenstricker, professor of medicine at the University of Georgia, reporting on a survey he made some time ago of the effects of rationing on 5000 civilians in various parts of Great Britain.

"The rich certainly eat less and the poor eat more of the foods which are essential to good nutrition—but for a tremendous majority of the people the diet is incredibly monotonous."

Earlier, Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard, while making no specific reference to the status of the Yankee waistline, declared that because of increased production and more equitable distribution of food through rationing and other means, "there are probably more people properly fed, and fewer people underfed, in the United States, than before the war began."

Investigator Questions 6 Decisions by Judge Davis

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—Thomas Raeburn White, prominent Philadelphia attorney who conducted a two-year investigation for the Third U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals into the judicial conduct of former Circuit Judge J. Warren Davis, reported to the court today that he believed Davis handed down six "crooked decisions"—five in the bankruptcy case of William Fox, onetime millionaire movie magnate.

The sixth decision was in favor of the Universal Oil Products Co. in a patent case involving several millions of dollars, the report said. White added that he believed Davis received "a financial share" of a $50,000 fee which he said the Universal company paid its attorney, Morgan S. Kaufman of Scranton, Pa. The report recommended that the decision be set aside.

Kaufman handled Fox's bankruptcy litigation.

Fox pleaded guilty two years ago to a charge of conspiring with Davis and Kaufman to obstruct justice and defraud the United States and was sentenced to a year-and-a-day in prison.

Davis and Kaufman were indicted on the same charges but two juries failed to agree and the charges were dropped.

Senate Approves Bill Increasing Dependents' Pay

The Senate, by voice vote yesterday approved a bill raising cash payments to dependents of service men. The measure now goes to the White House.

The legislation, providing $80 a month for a wife and one child and $20 monthly for each additional child, passed the house unanimously Monday. Present payments are $62 a month for a wife and one child and $10 for each additional child.

The Senate's approval was a formality since it voted for the higher payments several days ago as an amendment to the Bailey-Clark substitute for the Wheeler bill to defer drafting of fathers.

"ONE FOR ALL!"

The Community War Fund campaign now in progress is for 145 agencies. These agencies are roughly divided into three groups: (1) Those that serve the men and women in the armed services; (2) The United Nations War Relief; and (3) The Community Chests and other welfare agencies in the District of Columbia, the Counties of Arlington, Va., Fairfax, Va., Montgomery, Md., and Prince Georges, Md.

The one fund is for all. Ten thousand persons representing every phase of community life have volunteered their services to raise the local allotment—$4,800,000. Their task is big and vitally important. Help them—all you can. Make your free will offering generous and prompt. Give in accordance with the multiple need and your conscience.

Last year, the Capital Transit Company and employees together contributed $37,172 to this cause. Today the need is greater. We, too, have dug deep into our incomes to buy War Bonds; to pay taxes; to meet many obligations. But, the supreme obligation for each of us is to support those who are fighting our fight for Civilization—Civic Kindness—Compassion—on the warfronts and the homefronts, too. And that's the specialty of the Community War Fund.

Smuts Stresses U. S. Role; Sees 1944 Invasion

By Richard G. Massock
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 19.—Allied forces will make advances in southeastern Europe this year, and next year will make an all-out assault on Continental Europe with United States troops playing a leading and decisive part, Field Marshal Jan Christiaan Smuts prophesied today.

"Such a role in the war would also be the best justification for the all-important part the United States is likely to play in the peace and the building up of a new world thereafter," Marshal Smuts, Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa," declared in a commentary on the progress of the war delivered in London's bomb-scarred Guild Hall.

"While every ally will go all out to bring about the final climax the USA—latest, freshest and most potent newcomer in the field—may have to play a decisive part in the concluding act of the great war drama," he said.

Sees Further Gains This Year

Before the end of this year "we may confidently reckon on still further advances, especially in southern and southeastern Europe," said the 73-year-old, still vigorous statesman.

"By the coming winter," Smuts continued, "we shall have closed in upon Hitler's central fortress of Europe and be making our dispositions for a grand assault by all arms next year.

"That assault will be our first priority and while it goes on we shall be increasing our pressure in the Far East and taking all preparatory steps for the assault upon Japan, which is our second priority."

Hitler's fall probably will facilitate and hasten the fall of Japan and bring an early ending of the war, he added.

Stresses Role of U. S.

Of the United States, Smuts said: "In spite of its already great contribution, its role . . . has been principally what it originally intended to be—the arsenal of democracy. Its industrial effort has been prodigious and still is moving to an almost incredible peak.

"Meanwhile . . . vast air and land forces have been forming and training and a considerable addition already has been made to the Allied war fronts in the East and West. But in view of the intense, prolonged strain and the excessive demand upon the British Commonwealth, American manpower has been rightly looked upon as our grand strategic eseve in ther West for the final moves in the war."

Smuts said the Americans' role would be justification for the United States' all-important part in negotiating peace and rebuilding the world, and that "for no nation in history has so great and honorable a destiny been marked out by the course of events. None ever had so high a mission of good and good will. On none have such high hopes been built."

Amid laughted in Commons Churchill retorted, "There is no obligation to listen to the 9 o'clock news."

Ten U. S. Fliers Saved Among Icebergs by Canadian Sailors in North Atlantic

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—Ten United States Army fliers have been rescued by the Canadian Minesweeper Georgian after they drifted on two rubber rafts for 18 hours in the iceberg-dotted North Atlantic, Naval Service Headquarters announced today.

When the rescue was carried out was not stated. The airmen's Flying Fortress had to be crash-landed after it developed engine trouble. It broke in two as it hit the water, and sank.

"The crew of the H. M. C. S. Georgian are highly commended for the efficient manner in which they carried out the rescue of 10 United States Army fliers," said the U. S. Government in a letter. "The rescue, which was made under trying conditions, was a difficult job well done.'

Lieut. Allan Boucher of Halifax, Ottawa and Regina, Georgian's commanding officer, said:

"We were on convoy escort duty at the time. Shortly before 5 in the morning I was called to the bridge when flares were set off our port bow.

"The fog was still a bit heavy and it was rather hard to ascertain just what type of flares they were. As it's the custom of enemy U-boats to send up rockets to draw convoy escorts out of position we were a little leery at first. When another flare went up I decided to chance it."

There were several other close calls with icebergs, and when located the airmen's rafts were crowded between two huge bergs.

"There wasn't sufficient room for us to maneuver between them, so the trick was to get into position so they would drift down on us," said Lieut. Alex Grant of Montreal, who took charge or the rescue party on the quarterdeck. "I ordered the ship's scramble nets to be lashed over the side."

Leading Seamen Albert Baker of Ottawa and Edward White and Edward Hitchin, both of Toronto, went over to help the airmen aboard.

"They were so cold and numb from exposure they could hardly move," said Engine Room Artificer Thomas Pate of Toronto.

"Maybe it was just routine for these Canadian sailors," said James B. Crary of Canton, N. Y., one of the American fliers, "but God bless them, and I hope they're around every time I'm rescued. They work like fiends and really take risks."

Besides Crary, the rescued fliers were Elinger Hall, Des Moines; Herbert Schudler, Richmond, Va.; Kenneth Harland, Philadelphia; Brad Summers ,Marshfield, Oreg.; Edward Keatley, Atlanta; Clifford Spradlin, Wichita; Max Verber, Kellogg, Iowa; Holgate J. Dean, Fall River, Mass., and Donald Horden, Salt Lake City.

Just a minute, lady!

HERE'S WHAT YOUR GOVERNMENT SAYS:
"Enough food is wasted annually in the home to feed the larger part of our armed forces at home and abroad."
The War Food Administration shows this waste as over 8 per cent of the foods bought by consumers. That's the equivalent of 88 average family meals a year.
All this food isn't thrown in the garbage can, of course. Some isn't bought intelligently—some isn't stored correctly—some isn't prepared right. But it's all a waste of food, and food is a weapon of war.

WHAT American woman would knowingly waste a bit of food at a time like this? Not one! We all know that!

But there's no getting around it—wasting food has been a habit with most of us Americans.

And the worst of it is, that when we waste this food, it isn't all we waste. We waste man and woman power, too. As the country's largest canner of fruits and vegetables, Del Monte knows only too well what that means.

We know firsthand the months it took the farmers to grow just Del Monte foods. We know how hard it was this summer to get all the help needed to pack these foods—and how patriotically housewives who never before had worked in a cannery helped out, alongside our regular staff. We know the many train and truck miles it took to get these foods to your grocer—and the hundreds of thousands of busy days put in by grocers just to make them available.

Probably you are doing everything you know to prevent waste. But if you want to be sure—if you want to plug every loophole—check your own shopping and eating habits against the questions below. It's one simple way to do an even better job of winning America's battle on the food front.

Check yourself against these 9 points to be sure all your food "Fights for Freedom"

1. Do you plan your buying ahead?
Haphazard shopping's out — particularly for perishables. You'll avoid having so much left over your family won't eat it, or so little you can't use it.

2. Do you buy only what you need?
You know how much your family eats—why buy more? And "point-shop" early in the ration period, for best chances of finding the foods or brands your family is sure to "finish up."

3. Do you buy brands you know?
A wise precaution against waste any time. For instance, with both points and hard-earned cash at stake, it will pay you doubly well to check the Del Monte varieties your grocer has.

4. Do you store foods correctly?
Prompt and proper home storage helps prevent spoilage and vitamin loss. Be sure you know the right place and the right temperature for storage of each type of food you buy.

5. Do you serve healthful meals?
Plan to serve every day each of the "Basic Seven" food groups. In groups 1, 2 and 3 there are many Del Monte Fruits, Vegetables and Juices. Those your grocer has can make meal planning easier.

6. Do you prepare foods carefully?
Be a pot-watcher! Burned food is wasted food. Save health values by quick-cooking fresh vegetables, slow-roasting meats. Merely heat (don't boil) Del Monte Vegetables.

7. Do you "lick the platter clean"?
This is no time for your eyes to be bigger than your appetite. And to urge second helpings on other folks when they're not hungry isn't hospitality, it's waste!

8. Do you use up all leftovers?
A few Del Monte Peaches, for instance, saved out today can brighten a pudding tomorrow. Genuine goodness such as Del Monte brings you will bear a world of "working over."

9. Do you turn in your waste fats?
Maybe you think the little you have won't help—yet a tablespoon saved every day for a month makes enough nitroglycerine for a hand grenade. Turn waste fats in to your butcher.

Okla. Suspect Tries to Saw Way to Escape

Floyd Junior Madison, 18-year-old youth who insists he killed a policeman near his home in Oklahoma, attempted to break out of Prince Georges County Jail Monday by sawing through the bars of his cell, county police said yesterday.

Palice said that when they discovered the attempted break, Madison had already cut through one bar and was working on a second.

Madison was arrested by a posse of county police early Saturday after he allegedly held up and robbed and then shot David Seidel, 25, of Takoma Park, a naval student, on a road near Greenbelt, Md. Seidel suffered only a flesh wound in the face. Madison is held on charges of assault with intent to kill and holdup and robbery.

The attempted break was discovered, police said, when County Sheriff J. Earle Sheriff went to the jail Monday afternoon to take another prisoner to the Circuit Court for trial. The prisoner told the sheriff that he had heard sounds of sawing in Madison's cell.

Sheriff immediately returned to the jail with two officers and discovered the sawed bars. With two county officers he made the youth strip and found six hack-saw blades concealed in the soles of his shoes, police reported. Sheriff said that special measures were being taken to prevent a second attempt at a break.

Shortly after his arrest, Madison "bragged" to county officers that he had received $500 for killing an Oklahoma patrolman "because he knew too much about a local political deal."

Prince Georges police immediately communicated with the Oklahoma authorities, who wired back that the boy was wanted there for six auto thefts, several holdups and two jailbreaks, but that at the ime the officer was killed Madison had been in a reformatory and could not have done the shooting. Madison, however, insisted that the reformatory phase was "only a part of my alibi."

Rep. Satterfield's Son Wounded in Pacific

Ensign Dave E. Satterfield 3d, 22, of Richmond, Va., naval flier attached to an aircraft carrier, has been wounded in the South Pacific, his father, Representative Satterfield (Democrat) of Virginia, disclosed yesterday.

"All we know," said Representative Satterfield, "is that I have received a letter from the captain of Dave's carrier in which he tells me that he has been wounded and will be shortly hospitalized at a base in the southern Pacific. He was wounded while flying a Grumman Hellcat fighter somewhere in the South Pacific. We have no further details."

Young Satterfield volunteered in December, 1941, and received his training at Anacostia, D. C., and Corpus Christi, Tex.

His younger brother, Richard Satterfield, is attending the Naval Preflight Training School at the University of Georgia.

He's thinking about calling the folks back home

Going to call tonight, when he's off duty. He won't have much time and that call means a lot to him.

Might be to a mother or dad or sweetheart right in your town or on your street. It can be as close and near to you as that.

You can help him get better service if you don't do any Long Distance calling of your own between 7 and 10 each night. That's about the only time he can get to the telephone.

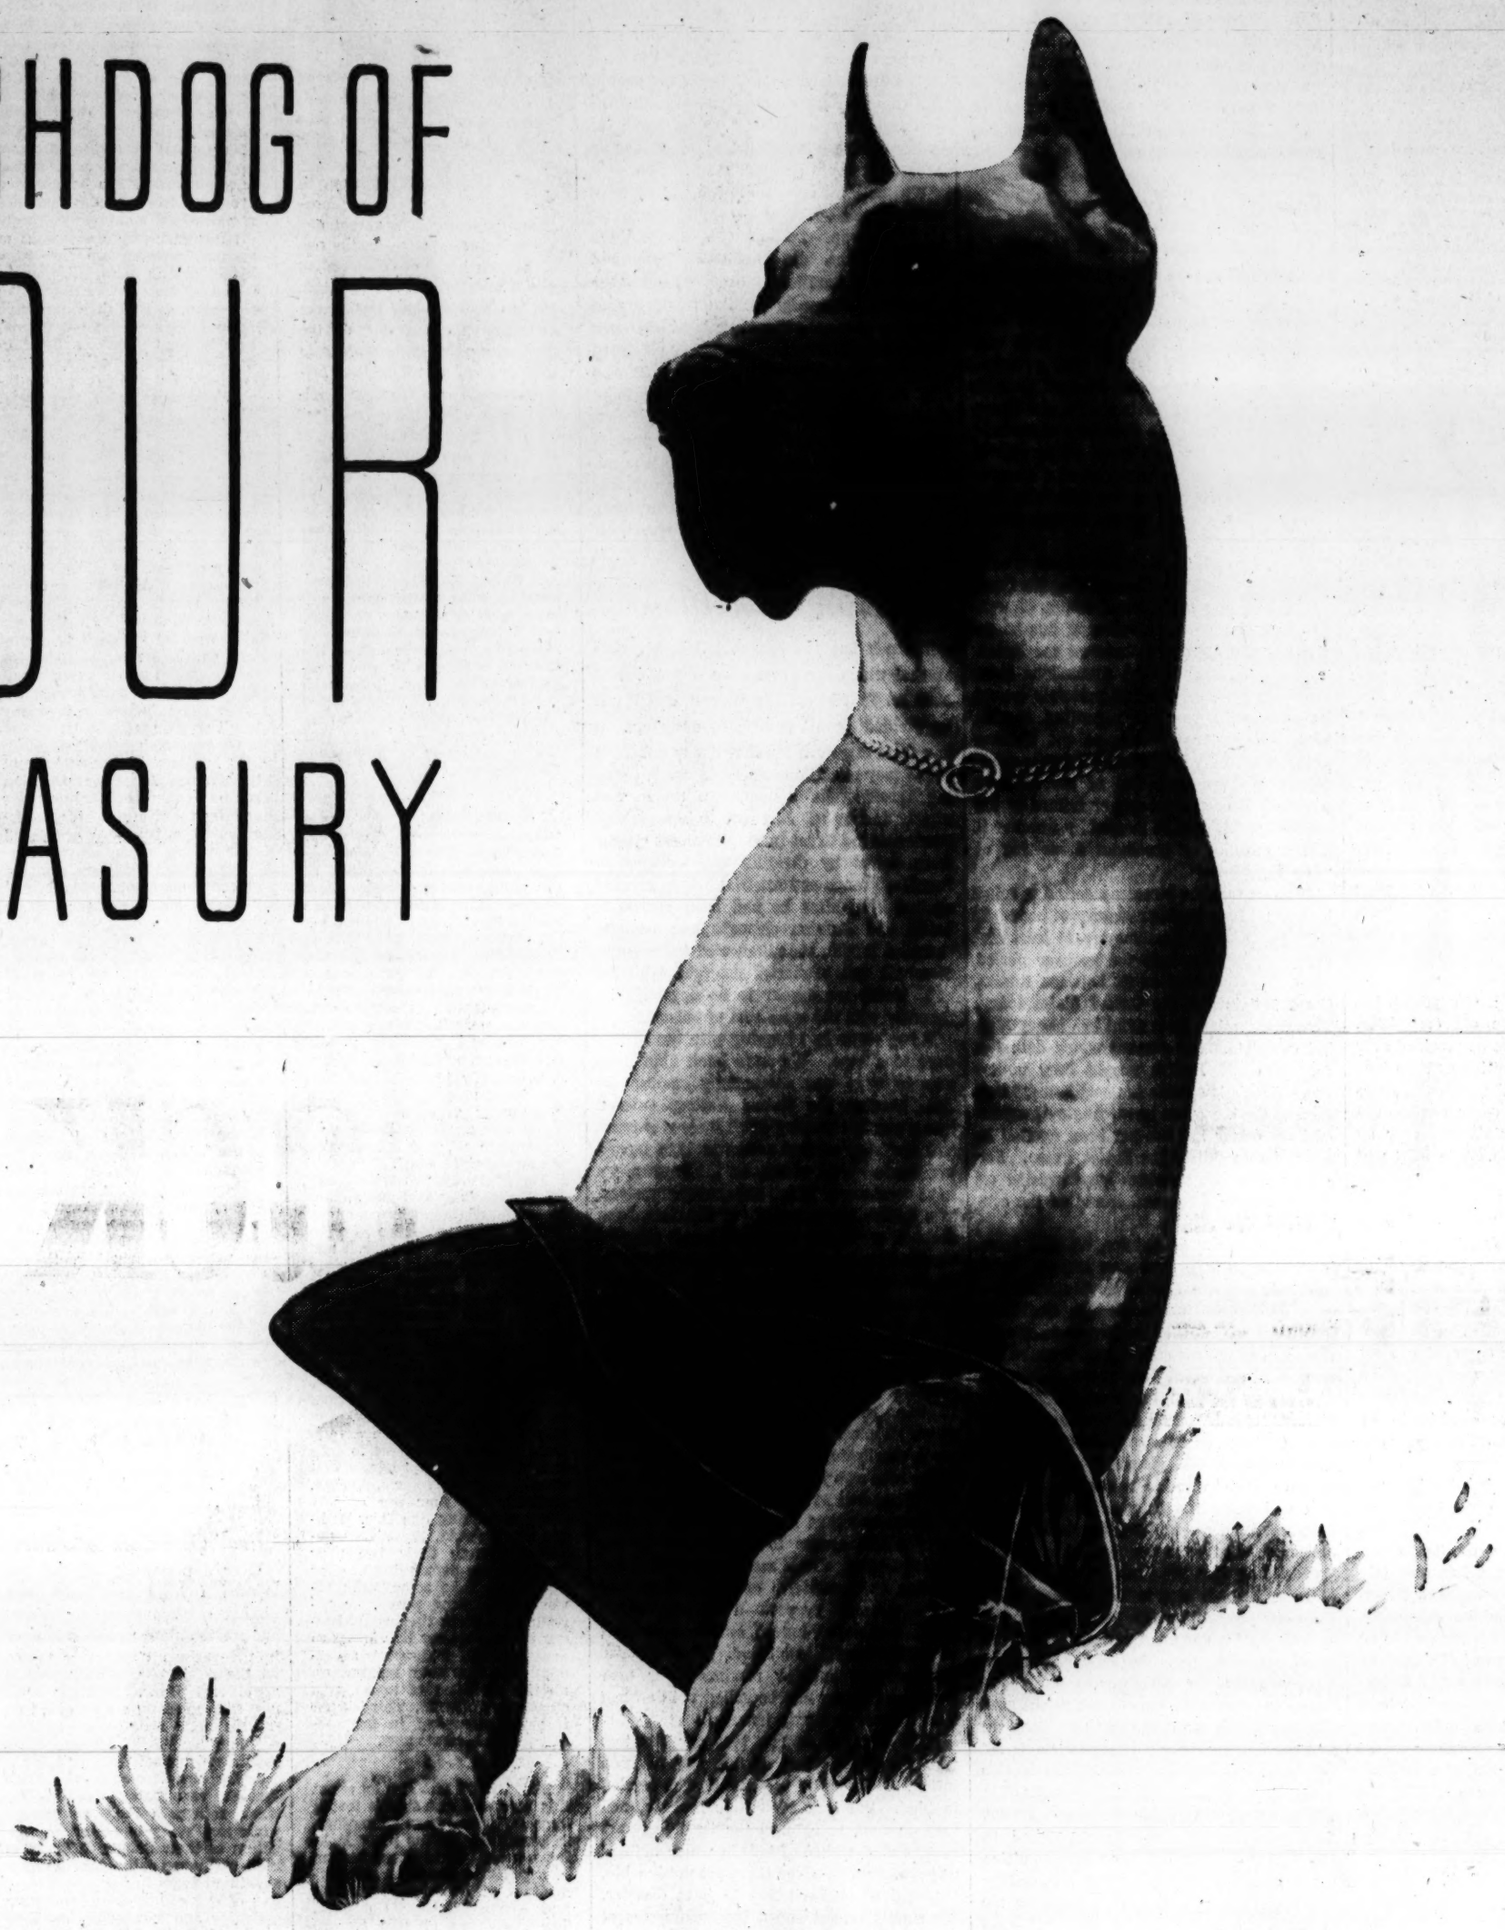
WATCHDOG OF YOUR TREASURY



For fifty years, Kann's has been on guard to help thrifty Washingtonians keep their budgets in balance. We've been at it ever since the days we helped folks save up for their first horseless buggies.

In all this time we've rarely seen dollars called upon to do as much as they must today! You pay Income Tax or buy War Bonds to help safeguard your country's future. Your Red Cross subscriptions carry mercy across the most distant horizons. Your USO dollars speed cheer to men half a world away. We could go on and on . . .

All this takes careful planning. And we've learned a lot about that in our fifty thrifty years. True, we're faced with wartime shortages, curtailments and restrictions. We can't supply you with many of the things you used to buy at Kann's. And we can't help you cut your living costs as much as we could in normal times.

However, like all good patriots today, when you have to make your dollars count—you can count on Kann's as a friendly ally in your efforts to buy the most for the least.

Retreat From Coxism

Meeting under the chairmanship of Representative Lea, the House committee investigating the Federal Communications Commission has gone a long way toward brushing away the disrepute it had brought upon itself under the direction of Representative Cox. The rules of procedure it adopted on Monday stand out in refreshing contrast to the techniques employed by Congressman Cox and Eugene L. Garey, the committee's counsel. Of course, no rules can guarantee a fair investigation. But they can prevent some of the outrageous abuses to which Messrs. Cox and Garey stooped. That now appears to be the committee's intention.

The committee struck a resounding blow at its former chairman when it concluded that the resolution authorizing its inquiry does not sanction secret hearings before only members of its staff. For such illegal hearings were the chief weapon which Messrs. Cox and Garey used to smear the FCC.

Merely to recite the rules of fair play now put into effect, moreover, is to condemn the practices followed by the old committee. Hereafter all hearings must be presided over by a member of the committee and must be open to the public unless the testimony deals with military secrets or other confidential data. Oaths will be administered only by the presiding Congressman. The FCC will be notified of all hearings and will be given full opportunity to present facts relevant to the inquiry. In short, the investigation may now become a conscientious search for information about the FCC instead of a witch hunt conducted for the most part behind closed doors. Testimony taken in secret session, with no member of the committee present, will not be accepted without further questioning of the witness before the committee. That will give the committee a chance to exclude from the record testimony obtained by Mr. Garey's brow-beating technique.

Any investigation conducted for the purpose of enlightening Congress instead of bedeviling an executive agency would have followed these rules from the beginning. The fact that the committee has now laid down this standard of fair conduct is certainly a credit to itself and its new chairman. But at the same time it appears to be an admission of no confidence in its counsel. If Mr. Garey were qualified for this assignment, he would not need to be bound by a rigid standard of fair conduct. Mr. Garey himself ought to realize, moreover, that his special talents as a star-chamber performer will be wasted now that the committee has pledged itself to conduct its investigation on a plane that is in keeping with the dignity and responsibility of Congress.

We regret that our editorial of last Friday prematurely assumed that the Lea Committee had accepted without reservation the star-chamber testimony which Mr. Garey tried to get inserted into the record. Part of this testimony was sent to the committee's reporter to be typed and was being distributed in transcript form. This fact gave us the impression that several volumes of star-chamber testimony were being dumped into the record. But the distribution of that testimony was stopped when the matter reached Mr. Lea's attention, and much of it will now probably go into the incinerator, as The Post suggested it should.

The committee has made a good beginning. If it follows the logic of its new rules and tosses out Mr. Garey along with the star-chamber testimony he collected, the House will be in a fair way to recover the prestige it lost during several months of acquiescence in Coxism.

Unhappy Greece

As if unhappy Greece has not already suffered enough—having during the past three years undergone invasion, occupation, spoliation, famine and disease—she finds herself today in the midst of a new chapter of horrors. Something like a state of civil war has broken out among the rival Greek guerilla organizations whose original purpose has been and whose main aim remains the expulsion of the enemy from Greek soil. One would assume that this aim and purpose would be enough to cement all elements of the Greek population.

This, unfortunately, is not proving to be the case in Greece, any more than it is in neighboring Yugoslavia. That this serves German rather than Greek purposes is, alas, only too true. It creates the suspicion that the Germans in Greece have done all in their power to foster a disunity which makes it possible for Hitler to rule the land with a minimum of men. However, there is probably far more to the Greek turmoil than German intrigue. We must recognize that the peoples who have lived under Hitler's horrible yoke are to some extent sick in mind as well as in body. The sheer weight of suffering has made them abnormal. It may be years, in fact, before they again become normal.

In the meantime the Allies now and in the days following liberation must do all in their power to help them recover from their psychic as well as physical wounds. The dissidents in the circumstances cannot be judged too harshly. And the sooner the day of liberation comes, the more rapid real convalescence can begin.

Issue At Moscow

As Messrs. Eden, Hull and Molotoff get down to business at Moscow, the point needs to be stressed that their meeting, dramatic and important as it is, is not intended to be either definitive or conclusive. It is only tentative and preliminary. The principal object of the discussions between Russia's Foreign Commissar, Britain's Foreign Secretary and the American Secretary of State is, in other words, not to reach an agreement on specific issues but to arrive at a common understanding regarding the principles that are to guide the three nations in their future relations.

If such principles are agreed upon, a solution of the specific problems facing the three powers can be left to Messrs. Stalin, Churchill and Roosevelt. A meeting of this triumvirate would then be a foregone conclusion. If, however, the present discussions show that such an agreement on principle cannot be attained, agreement regarding specific issues—such, for instance, as the German problem or the problem of Russia's western boundaries—would be out of the question anyway. Thus the success or failure of the Moscow parley will be gauged by whether it makes possible or precludes a meeting of "The Big Three."

The fact that the Moscow meeting is being held at all is in itself an augury of hope. It suggests that the Russians are at least disposed to continue into the postwar period the cooperation that exists between Russia, Great Britain and the United States today. That cooperation, be it admitted, is anything but complete. For reasons which both the American and British people fully understand, Russia is outside the coalition fighting Japan. On the other hand, Anglo-American military power has not yet been exerted in a manner to satisfy the Soviet Union. For a long time the Russians have insisted on the opening of a "second front" on the continent of Europe.

The difference of opinion on this issue is not over strategy but over timing. Both the American and British Governments are fully determined to invade the Continent from the west, but they propose to do so only when circumstances are such as to make the chances of success at least better than even. The decision cannot be based on political factors. It must be determined by military capacity. We can be sure that Mr. Hull will explain this to Mr. Molotoff, and that the military official who is a member of his mission will bring the Russian leaders up to date regarding our military timetable. That, obviously, is as far as they can go.

One thing that Mr. Hull may have some difficulty in explaining to the Russians is just what our postwar foreign policy is going to be. On that point no American official can speak with certainty. The evidence is overwhelming that we have turned our backs, finally and definitely, on our isolationist past. But how far we are prepared to go along the new path of international cooperation is not yet clear. Neither the Fulbright resolution which the House of Representatives has overwhelmingly approved nor the similar though differently worded resolution approved by the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee offers us much guidance. The phraseology of both of these documents is vague in the extreme.

Yet if the Russians are the realists they are supposed to be, they will realize that a willingness by the Soviet Union to cooperate will give a fillip to American readiness to do so. To take the position, as they may do, that they cannot show their hand until after we have done so is to repeat the tale of belling the cat. That tale, as everyone knows, had an unhappy ending. Certainly it can be taken for granted that both the people and Government of this Nation are prepared to meet Russia more than halfway, provided Russia is willing to do the same. It is the disposition of both that will count.

Holman Resolution

Senator Holman's idea of giving the people of the District an opportunity to tell Congress what form of local government they prefer is thoroughly constructive. Any local government is more likely to be successful if it meets with widespread approval of the people most concerned with its operations. In our opinion, however, there are two basic defects in the Holman resolution—defects that might defeat his principal objective of creating a satisfactory local government here.

Under the Holman proposal a supervisor of elections would invite citizens' associations and other civic organizations to submit proposed charters for the District. With all due respect to these civic bodies and the excellent work they do, we do not believe that any one of them is competent to draw up a charter that will meet with general approval of local residents. Such an invitation would probably bring forth a dozen charters, each sponsored by a different group. The rank and file could not be expected to study all of them and make an intelligent choice between them. So the net result might be confusion and loss of interest instead of concentration of community sentiment upon one feasible plan.

If a vote of the people is to be taken, we believe that it should be on acceptance or rejection of one carefully worked-out plan of local government that could be readily understood. The McCarran bill calling for a city manager-commission type of local regime might, with suitable amendments, become the subject of a city wide poll. Or a charter commission might be elected to draw up a plan for later submission to the people. But Congress could not expect any clear-cut guidance from a poll that would leave the voters many confused choices, of which perhaps none would be satisfactory.

We believe also that Senator Holman restricts the voting privilege to much too small a group. To limit the vote to those over 21 who are domiciled here and pay taxes to the District, or have lived in the District continuously for five years, would leave an enormous number of residents still disfranchised. The McCarran bill's provision opening the vote to any citizen over 21 who has lived in the District one year and declared his intention to vote is much simpler and far more democratic. In its present form the Holman resolution is much too complicated and uncertain of results to compete with the McCarran bill as a working basis for the creation of a responsible local government here.

Bickering With Allies

There is but one weapon left in the Nazi arsenal which can prove fatal to the United Nations. That weapon is distrust, and it can be wielded against us only by ourselves. It is a form of poison the first heady effects of which may seem innocuous but which, coursing through the system, can divide and utterly destroy it. Just such poison enabled Frederick the Great in 1762 to wrest victory from defeat by dividing the coalition of Russian, French and Austrian forces arrayed against him; after he had been beaten in battle and Russian cossacks had actually occupied Berlin, the alliance of his enemies dissolved and Frederick emerged triumphant. Today we appear to be tippling dangerously with the same sort of poison.

It has begun by bickering with the British over lend-lease. We have been able until now to wage war successfully against the Axis because the United Nations entered into a genuine pooling of all their resources. But our very success seems to have turned our heads. With victory on the horizon, we have commenced to fall out among ourselves. The British, say some of our Senators, have grabbed credit for lend-lease goods actually supplied by us. London newspapers, not to be outdone in pettiness by our senatorial spokesmen, assert that the American Red Cross distributed British milk to mothers and children in North Africa without proper designation of its source.

This sort of talk is worse than childish. It is tragic. It degrades the whole nature of our alliance. It is, in the real sense of the word, sacrilegious. For it makes a mockery of the men who yielded their lives in Tunisia and Sicily and at Salerno without any captious querying as to whether the battle's glory would accrue to England or to the United States. Those men died without distinction as to uniform or flag. They died for a common purpose—a purpose which could be achieved, indeed, only by a merging of their strength and blood. To jeopardize that purpose now by recriminations over goods and money can be called nothing less than a gross and ugly betrayal.

It is clear, of course, that our Senators who started this sort of talk had no such intent. Neither did the British who replied in kind. But it is high time that we, and they as well, recognized the terrible implications of the kind of talk in which both of us have engaged. Even if it were not ignoble, it would be an invitation to joint disaster. We simply cannot afford the meannesses of commercial rivalry while we are in the midst of a struggle for survival. If we count our contributions and weigh them parsimoniously against those of our allies, we will shackle our own strength. Whatever we win from our friends will be to the profit of our enemies.

It seems to us, therefore, that this is a singularly inauspicious time for a senatorial investigation of lend-lease. The only question concerning lend-lease which we need to raise at this moment is whether it is promoting victory. And this question can be answered affirmatively without hesitation. Other questions, of the sort which certain Senators have propounded, can be only mischievous and misleading, can serve only to promote division and distrust. We are committed now to a great common aim. We shall achieve it only if we and our allies give and blend our resources without stint, faithfully and with full faith in one another.

NAVY NURSE

At first she was like snow,
Shining and white and still
To lean our pain against;
And afterwards like Spring and columbines.
It was the way she smoothed the sheets,
Or placed the silver on the tray,
It was the gentle grace she lent
To dignify our small conceits,
And help us through the endless nights.

Through her we learned to dream once more
Of mountain paths and streams,
Ourselves grown strong again.
Yes, that is how she was,
Each man of us thought so—
Like columbines, and snow

Welles' Speech

By Mark Sullivan

World Organization

PLANS FOR world organization to preserve peace come from many sources. All are persons of good will—a man does not give time and thought to preserving peace unless he is unselfish and public spirited. But good will is not enough. Among all who possess that common quality, there are some who have special equipment of mind and experience.

High in this limited group is Mr. Sumner Welles. For more than ten years, as Assistant and Undersecretary of State, the foreign relations of the United States have been his daily work. He has been a chief instrument in bringing about one of the most successful achievements in international relations that history records—his good-will policy that embraces the countries on the American Hemisphere. He has a fine and exact mind. The cool precision of his mental processes is greater than his writings and speeches reveal. In the exchanges of thought that compose negotiation, few men function on as high a level as Mr. Welles. Of Mr. Welles' personality, some of the public will have early opportunity to judge—it is announced that he will make 20 speeches throughout the country dealing with world organization for peace. Those who see and hear Mr. Welles will not find glamour, nor the devices that attempt glamour—but they will find a quality more impressive than glamour.

Mr. WELLES last week gave out a tentative plan for world organization. This is not the final plan, nor is any other of the many proposed from many sources. The ultimate plan we shall arrive at only by comparison of many plans, all subjected to the test of criticism and debate. But Mr. Welles' plan has two attributes that give it special standing. One is the source it comes from. The other is that the first and extremely important step proposed by Mr. Welles is practically identical with the first step proposed in many plans from other sources. When, in many plans, we find one step common to all, that is a sign we are on the right track.

The first step, as envisaged by Mr. Welles, is an agreement, now, by the four large members of the United Nations — the United States, Britain, Russia, and China. These would agree upon handling of present problems and problems arising in the near future. Such agreement would not be a great expansion of what the four nations are already doing. They are already acting in agreement upon large problems having to do with conduct of the war. Mr. Welles, and others, would have them expand their present agreement to take care of immediate problems that overlap upon both war and peace. Probably the four are already doing something like this. Without much doubt, these four nations, through their heads or agencies, are persuading smaller nations to take some steps toward facilitating peace, or refrain from steps that would hinder peace. To say this is not to deny that all embracing agreement of these four nations, on all the problems of peace, will encounter difficulty. This is what is being attempted in the conference at Moscow now.

THE IMPORTANT point about this proposed first step is that it appears, in one form or another, in practically all the plans looking toward world organization. It appears in the informal suggestions of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. The frequency of this feature suggests what in fact is true—that it is practically indispensable, if there is to be any world organization for peace at all. It is unthinkable that, on the day of victory in war, the four nations should fall apart and go their separate ways. It would be contrary to common sense that, if it should happen, we should be obliged to conclude that there is not any common sense—any sense held in common—covering the four nations. That would be a tragic conclusion.

The first step would be temporary, to cover present conditions and emergencies. As soon as practicable, Mr. Welles would have the four great nations invite representatives from smaller nations or groups of nations, so as to form an "Executive Council." Out of this in turn should develop the permanent mechanism for preserving peace—called by Mr. Welles, formally, the "World Organization."

Coffin Nails

Thank you for your sarcastic editorial, "Coffin Nails." It is a most ingenious name for the filthy smoking habit.

The worst violators of the nasty habit are the women, especially the silly young girls. They think that their make-up is incomplete without turning their throats into smokestacks. Travel on trains has become unbearable. The railroads are following the line of least resistance by permitting smoking everywhere. When I come out of a coach I find it necessary to change into fresh attire in order to ventilate the clothing and get the smoke out of it.

Torpedoes And Bombs

By Paul Schubert

Difference In Targets

IF THIS war has demonstrated one thing, it is the destructive power of the bomb. The current Air Force tag line, ascribed to a proposed German communique: "One of our cities is missing," is a tribute to the awful destructivness of the present-day bombing attack.

Planes can now be so concentrated over a target that bombs are dropped at a rate of well over 50 tons a minute. Planes can be so massed that between 2000 and 2500 tons of bombs are dropped on a single target area during one operation. The bombs used are extraordinarily destructive—a calculated mixture of incendiaries; high-explosive bombs of various weights up to 4-ton block-busters; parachute bombs which detonate before they strike the earth, so that their explosive force covers a greater ground area without spending itself in digging craters; delayed-action bombs which explode some minutes or hours after they land. Apart from these, there are unquestionably secret types for various special purposes.

THE AMERICAN contribution to the bombing art has been along the lines of precision bombing. We made precision a virtue of necessity, since in prewar days our Air Force was relatively small, and the targets against which we might theoretically operate were all very distant, so that we had to strive for the maximum possible number of hits out of the bombs dropped.

We were, furthermore, trying to hit small, spot targets.

We were trying to hit ships.

It is generally forgotten that the famous American precision bomb sight was developed for and by the Navy, which is the organization primarily concerned with sinking enemy ships.

High hopes were held that the precision bomb sight would revolutionize naval warfare. When the Army Air Force adopted the Navy's bomb sight our Army airmen likewise became tremendously enthusiastic over the theoretical possibilities of accurate spot bombing and made many sweeping predictions about the ability of "land-based bombers" to control ship movements within a long distance offshore. At times the Army went so far as to be quite patronizing to the Navy, as if the Navy had never thought of the idea of hitting a ship with a bomb.

Precision bombing has become a very important factor of the strategic bombing attack against land targets of all types. In its present form, however, it has evolved far beyond the original dream of "10 bombs, 10 hits, target demolished." The precision of our individual plane has been crossed with British devlopments as to mass and concentration. Our growing air force has now reached a point where we deliver large-scale long-range air attacks on targets in Germany, using 855 planes in a single operation. The bomb tonnage dropped is increasing rapidly as we mass greater numbers of planes and will increase still faster as new and larger types of planes are put into operation.

YET IT IS very interesting that with all the tremendous Allied air power concentrated in the British Isles, the British built and used midget submarines to attack German battleships based at Norway's Alten Fjord.

Why, asks the layman, can't we destroy those ships by bombing?

For the idea persists, born of many immoderate, sweeping claims, that all ships are highly vulnerable to bombing.

Like most sweeping generalizations, this idea is sheer myth, as all air forces who have tried bombing ships have long since discovered.

True, unprotected ships are vulnerable—though even these have a good chance to escape destruction if they are under way at sea and can use evasive maneuvers to twist and turn and dodge the bombing. And curiously enough, the more precise the bombing, the easier it is to dodge.

As for protected ships, they are a very difficult bombing target indeed. To begin with, a ship is exceedingly small as a target. Secondly, modern armor turns bombs, and it is almost impossible to penetrate heavy men-of-war with free-falling bombs (hence attempts to increase bomb penetrating power with rocket devices). Thirdly, modern men-of-war are defended by the greatest concentration of antiaircraft gunfire found anywhere on earth; in our own ships this feature has been increased one-hundredfold since the war began. The antiaircraft gunner, moreover, knows exactly where the attacking plane must fly if his bomb-release is to be dangerous.

The torpedo, on the other hand, and its variants, the skip-bomb, the near-miss and other attacks designed to detonate an explosive charge near or against the ship's hull underwater, are very deadly ship killers.

To launch torpedoes from planes means to fly into the jaws of death. It is impracticable against anchored ship targets, which have net and barrier protection.

Hence the experiments of various navies with midget submarines for harbor penetration and attack on ships at anchor.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

"Pre" Or "Post" Father

Over a period of the last few months I have read with conflicting sentiments of amusement and ire the many letters published in the various Washington papers on the subject of the drafting of "Pre-Pearl Harbor Fathers"—the first time in history, I believe, that fathers have ever been classified as "Pre" or "Post" in accordance with an historical date.

I, for one, am quite convinced that the vast majority of this Nation's fathers ("Pre" or "Post") while not living in ecstatic anticipation of their debuts in khaki or blue, will when called take up their appointed tasks in the armed services of our country with the same gallantry and loyalty as has been displayed by so many of their childless comrades.

The purblind statements, however, that fathers should cheerfully ignore all the responsibilities of marriage, children and home, and without further thought rush into military service in an all-embracing surge of patriotism, must certainly originate with those who have no such responsibilities or comprehension of them.

The grant by Congress of funds for the support of the wives and families of servicemen, officers excepted, is not only incompatible with a reasonable standard of living but is woefully insufficient to provide the basic requisites of food, clothing and shelter. Cognizance would be taken of the fact that there may be conditions which preclude sending a wife and several children to live with either the husband's parents or her own. Maid service is expensive and almost impossible to procure in critical labor areas. The only alternative in such a case is for the wife to find employment in order to supplement her meager allotment and if this is done there remains the more difficult problem of providing competent care for her children during her working hours. Perhaps the protagonists of the "Draft the Fathers Plan" expect the homes of the Nation to be thrown open in a sudden burst of generosity to the children of servicemen.

Today is our reality and there is no escape from it, but the dreams and hopes of tomorrow belong to our children. It is not a trust to be lightly tossed aside and all the patriotic platitudes will not dispel the nagging anxiety of the serviceman for the welfare of his family while he is engaged in securing "Freedom From Want" for the rest of humanity. Gallinger Personnel

The Gallinger investigation is shocking. Obviously the causes center upon the lack of competent personnel. There is plenty of cause for this lack. No self-respecting expert would work for the District Government at the humbling salaries offered. While private physicians and surgeons pile up $4000 and $5000 per month on private practices of the not so uncommon type, the poor devil who signs up with a Government hospital is lucky if he makes that much a year.

The heads testify one-third of their nursing positions are vacant at Gallinger. No wonder. Nurses of my acquaintance won't file an application for any Government position for fear of being frozen into a position at Gallinger or St. Elizabeths and denied the privilege of changing even to a private war nursing job.

Many registered nurses scorn the salaries they now can earn in their vital profession when they can make much more cold cash as milk wagon drivers, bus drivers, riveters, unskilled Government clerks—and easier work, too.

If we want our physically and mentally ill to be doctored and nursed efficiently, the least we could do is to reduce some of these extreme monetary disparities.

Mrs. Roosevelt

On October 12 the wife of the President celebrated her 59th birthday. She was not alone in observing this day as an event of special interest. It was also a happy incident in the lives of a great many people of every race, color and creed, who are drawn to her with stout bonds of affection.

Mrs. Roosevelt is a phenomenon. If there were no such person, she would have to be invented. She is everywhere and at one and the same time, such is her breathless velocity in getting about.

Her writings and speeches project a clear, cooperative desire to spread social, hygienic and academic education to the masses. She affirms in unmistakable terms the Four Freedoms as the heritage of man wherever he may live.

Mrs. Roosevelt's zest and exuberance in the things in which she is interested may well be considered a blessing to the generation in which she lives.

Relief At Last!

(The Office of Censorship has lifted the ban on the publication of weather news.—Ed note.)

Clash the cymbals! Toot the horns!
Let your spirits leap and climb!
Publishing the weather news
Will no longer be a crime.

Sound the tocsin! Ring the bells!
Let the whistles loudly blow!
It's not treason now to say,
"For tomorrow: Rain or snow."

Let's have music, let's have song!
Let's be festive, gay and bold!
It's no longer hoosegow stuff
To say, "Tuesday: fair and cold."

Clink the glasses! Give the toasts!
Let our mood be extra light!
Sabotage is not the charge
If you say, "Light frosts tonight."

Let's have cheering in the streets!
You're no menace at your best
If you breathe the guarded news;
"Winds will shift from east to west."

Let your joy be unconfined!
Your name won't be on the blotter
Just for penning this dispatch:
"Warm today; tomorrow hotter."

Let's make whoopee all together!

Central Authority

On page 7480 of the printed record of the testimony given by the head of the largest railroad brotherhoods, before the Senate Truman Committee investigating the defense program, this significant testimony is recorded:

"What we need is an integrated, monolithic war administration of production and manpower and supply on the one hand, and of economic policy on the other.

"We need to apply the principle of the Pepper-Kilgore-Tolan bill. We need to make sure that this central authority will be placed safely in civilian hands and not intrusted to that military task force in Washington which even now is gleefully watching civilians in their confusion and looking forward to a new order in America the symbol of which will be the four stars instead of the swastika."

To this the chairman added: "I think you will find a majority of this committee in agreement with you."

Are we about to lose our liberty because the free press chooses not to enlighten us on such developments? DANIEL BONEWELL.

Voyaging Senators

The report of the United States Senators who "went abroad" might be placed with Mr. Willkie's touch-and-go visit, including his report on Russia's attitude to our failure to make a frontal attack on the continent of Europe.

The writer has made many extensive trips abroad. Invariably the man with his mind made up as to what he will see, or wants to see, returns satisfied that he has seen it.

My experience is that a second visit to Europe and even a third has often completely reversed first impressions, particularly where truth and not partisan politics or anti-British prejudices had not been permitted to warp the mind.

The opinion which many of us get from the worthy five who have recently gone to the war front abroad is that they have unwittingly, perhaps, but none the less surely, done more to hinder the cause they would have helped than added anything to sum of popular knowledge. J. O. KNOTT.

Welles And Willkie

By Ernest Lindley

Ask That U. S. Assume Leadership

ALTHOUGH HE spoke as a private individual, Sumner Welles' speech to the Foreign Policy Association was in harmony with the thinking in the upper reaches of the Administration. This is not surprising, since Mr. Welles himself was most influential in developing the Administration's international policies to their present stage. Possibly as a private citizen, he could be slightly more direct in his treatment of certain points than any man vested with public office could at this moment. But this is doubtful, for as Undersecretary he was always the most lucid and direct of Administration spokesmen in the field of foreign policy—both in his prepared addresses and statements and in his responses to questions asked by representatives of the press and the radio.

LINDLEY

The Welles program fits together three elements in the organization of peace, each of which has had its special advocates. The first is the agreement among the great armed victors: Russia, Britain, China, and the United States. This is what Walter Lippmann has labeled a "nuclear alliance." It is essential, because unless the four great powers stick together, there can be no world-wide security. They alone have the means of enforcing the peace, although they may be assisted in this fundamental task by a revived French Republic and by "certain of our neighbors of the New World."

THE SECOND element is a broader international organization, which will give the smaller nations a voice and a part. Mr. Welles believes that this second step should be taken just as soon as the Big Four have reached an agreement. He understands the sensibilities of smaller nations, the danger of permitting the impression to grow that the Big Four intends to rule the world as dictators. From the American viewpoint, in particular, it may be advantageous to bring the smaller nations into active collaboration as rapidly as possible, since on many of the main problems of organizing the peace, their views will harmonize with ours.

At the same time, Mr. Welles proposes to avoid for the present the dangers of trying to reach decisions through an assembly or legislative body on which every nation would be represented. He suggests, instead, an executive council of the United Nations, composed of the Big Four and representatives of regional groups of states. This would become in due time the executive branch of a perfected international reorganization, and would organize and supervise such United Nations judicial, economic, and fact-gathering bodies as now exist or may be created.

The third element in Mr. Welles' plan is the regional association of states, exemplified in the Inter-American system. He would expect these regional associations to discharge important responsibilities, including the maintenance of peace within their own areas. Only in the event that a regional conflagration threatened the general peace would wider action become necessary.

Taken alone, every one of these methods of organizations has its weaknesses and dangers. Yet, if peace is to be made secure, the big armed powers must collaborate. If it is to be acceptable to the world generally, the smaller nations must have a part. If it is to be workable, there must be, in all probability, some form of decentralization on through regional associations.

MR. WELLES made some other rather concrete suggestions: (1) that any nation desiring to join the United Nations should be obligated to guarantee to its citizens the right of freedom of religion, of speech, and of information; and (2) that the colonial powers be held responsible as trustees for fostering the growth of self-government.

Wendell Willkie was not so explicit and complete as Mr. Welles, but his thinking certainly is in the same general direction. He stressed the dangers of an exclusive alliance—on which Mr. Welles did not need to dwell, since he was starting with a four-power agreement and proceeding from there. Both men know that the United States is strong, both know that it has throughout the world what Mr. Willkie has called previously a "reservoir" of good will. Both believe that we should take the leadership in organizing the peace—a leadership which is rightfully ours because of our strength and because the principles for which we stand are so widely acceptable to other peoples.

But we cannot effectively assert this leadership unless the Administration feels that it can act with the overwhelming support of the American people and until other nations are convinced that we have arrived at the essentials of a national policy which will not be upset by the next or ensuing elections. No absolute assurances can be given either to the Administration or to other nations. But there is, or should be, a degree of encouragement in the Fulbright resolution, the Republican declaration at Mackinac, and in the resolution approved by the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. Prompt passage of this last resolution by the Senate probably is the most helpful single step that can be taken at the moment. Mr. Welles was speaking to the hesitant members of the Senate, probably more than to any other group, when he derided the notion that we must wait to see what others want or demand before setting forth an American program and asserting the leadership which much of the world expects from us and recognizes that we have every right to exert.

Editors Favor Paid Bond Ads, Senators Told

By the Associated Press

An overwhelming majority of the editors and publishers of the Nation's small daily and weekly newspapers think the Government should pay for war bond advertising, Albert S. Hardy of Gainesville, Ga., president of the National Editorial Association, told the Senate Banking Committee yesterday.

Testifying in support of the bill by Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama authorizing up to 30 million dollars annually in Treasury bond advertising in newspapers, Hardy said a questionnaire survey by his association showed 94 per cent favored the legislation.

To the question: "Do you think the Government should pay for bond advertising?" Hardy said 2545 papers replied "yes," and 155 said "no."

Approximately 87 per cent of those answering the questionnaire stated they did not consider paid advertising would be a subsidy, or that it would have any effect on editorial policies.

Hardy said the NEA represented some 5000 newspapers, principally weeklies and semiweeklies, but including some dailies. Forty State press associations also have indorsed the Bankhead bill, he asserted.

Discussing opposition to the bill from the Treasury and some publishers, Hardy said:

"The motivating force back of the Government agencies' attacks stems from their almost fanatical desire to maintain the status quo in the widespread free publicity program.

The fact that the Government pays for every other service or commodity in the war effort is deliberately overlooked in the protests of officialdom.

"Newspaper publishers and editors are individualists. They cannot be regimented. The overwhelming percentages listed (in the questionnaire) represent the nearest approach to a meeting of minds as to the proper course to pursue."

Senator Bankhead declared that the Treasury is "trying to ride a free horse to death" by asking newspapers to contribute space for war bond drives without compensation.

U. S. May Take More Oil Out Of Venezuela

Caracas, Venezuela, Oct. 19 (AP). The presence here of a number of American oil men and expected visits of more gave rise today to belief the United States was planning to take more oil from Venezuela and might be endeavoring to secure additional oil land in this country.

Among those here now are Harry Sinclair, head of the Sinclair interests; George McDonald, member of the same firm and prominent Miami businessman; Clarence Stark of Bartlesville, Okla., representative of Phillips Petroleum; Leonard Henry, of Standard Oil of California; Henry Phillips of New York, president of Consolidated Oil, and his geologist, Hugh Russell of New York.

Scheduled to arrive tomorrow are C. H. Lieb, New York, president of Creole Petroleum Corp.; H. C. Weiss, Houston, Tex., president of the Humble Oil Refining Co.; Ralph W. Gallagher, New York, president and director, and Eugene Holman, director of Standard Oil of New Jersey.

Viewed in the light of recent senatorial statements that United States oil reserves were being reduced seriously in supplying Allied petroleum requirements, the Venezuelan gathering might result in increased use of oil from that nation's wells.

Midshipmen Rush Marriage License Office for 2 Hours

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—The U. S. Navy, as part of Cupid's strategy, took possession of New York's marriage license bureau for nearly two hours today.

At 11 a. m. an officer of the midshipmen's school at Columbia University telephoned the bureau that 75 new graduates of the school were "on their way down there right now to get licenses" and had orders to be back at school by 1 o'clock.

The bureau staff canceled luncheon engagements, and when the midshipmen began arriving with their brides-to-be special tables and details of clerks were awaiting them.

Tomorrow the midshipmen will become ensigns. After that they will get 10-day furloughs before assuming their naval duties.

The Gallup Poll

Missouri Republicans Divided on Choice Of 1944 Presidential Candidate, Survey Shows

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 19.—When Wendell Willkie invaded Missouri last week he entered a State where three leading Republican candidates for 1944 have almost equal popular strength with the rank and file of Republican voters.

The three men are Willkie, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, and Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Dewey held a slight lead over the other two at the time Willkie made his address in St. Louis. Whether Willkie succeeded in winning Missouri Republican voters over to his side by his appearance in the State will be indicated in surveys by the Institute in the immediate future.

At the time he went to St. Louis, the Institute had just completed a survey among Missouri Republicans in which it recorded their vote on eight Republican leaders who have been most frequently mentioned as likely GOP candiates in 1944. Each Republican voter was asked:

"Which one of these men would you prefer as the Republican candidate for President next year?"

The vote among Missouri Republicans is:

Dewey	28%
MacArthur	26
Willkie	25
Taft	7
Bricker	7
Stassen	5
Warren	1
Saltonstall	1

Comparatively speaking, Governor Dewey's popular lead in the State is not large, especially in view of the fact that the Republican candidate situation is extremely fluid not only in Missouri but elsewhere.

Willkie is in a position in Missouri where he could, with a minimum of favorable "breaks," easily emerge as the top candidate with the rank and file.

His chief competition, next to that offered by Governor Dewey, seems to come from the supporters of General MacArthur. It will be noted that the general is favored in the survey by about as many Republican voters in Missouri as Willkie is.

U. S., Britain Step Up Soviet Aid

By the Associated Press

Two American moves for closer relations with Russia were disclosed yesterday as the first great Anglo-American-Soviet conference of the war got underway in Moscow.

The United States, along with the United Kingdom and Canada, signed a new lend-lease agreement promising to Russia increased shipments of munitions and supplies. This promise already is being kept and, it was learned, may even be exceeded since shipping no longer is the problem it once was in making deliveries. Russia likewise plans to do more for the western Allies under the new agreement by supplying raw materials.

Furthermore, it was learned that the United States is completely revamping its military representation in Moscow for the specific purpose of placing there officers who hold the confidence of the Russians and are prepared to help coordinate military plans among American, British and Russian forces closing in on Germany.

Maj. Gen. John R. Deane, former secretary of the joint and combined chiefs of staff here who went with Secretary Hull to Moscow, will head a new military mission in the Russian Capital. Brig. Gen. Joseph A. Michela, American military attache there, is being recalled and the office of military attache there being abolished.

Ranking immediately under Deane, Brig. Gen. Sidney Spalding, a lend-lease expert who has specialized on aid to Russia, replaces Brig. Gen. Philip R. Faymonville as the American military supply expert.

Deane is qualified by his work wth the chiefs of staff here to work as fully as the Russians may desire on strategic planning and coordination, although he obviously has no power to make commitments and/or discuss on behalf of the American command any subjects other than those authorized.

Spalding, who has a reputation for being able to get along with people and who holds the confidence of the Russians, and Deane were picked for their positions not only because of their professional qualifications, but also because their assignments should remove any conflict of personalities such as is understood to have hampered American representation in Moscow at times in the past.

The new lend-lease agreement, known as the "third protocol" among those who drew it up, covers Anglo-American-Canadian aid to Russia and Russian reciprocal aid to the western Allies for the 12 months beginning last July 1. It represents a compromise between all the Russians wanted and what the western Allies felt they could furnish. The final commitments are said to be very satisfactory to all parties.

Specific terms of lend-lease agreements are not announced as they involve the movement and nature of strategic materials which are secret.

However, sources close to the lend-lease administration yesterday confirmed that Russian reciprocal aid would increase under the new agreement and that because of the difference in shipping distances such reciprocation might go largely to Britain, thus replacing some American aid to the United Kingdom.

Fonda, Now in Navy, Wins Deferment of Suit

Los Angeles, Oct. 19 (AP).—Henry Fonda, now a U. S. Navy petty officer, won't have to appear in response to Mrs. Barbara Thompson's suit charging he is the father of her daughter, until three months after he leaves the Navy, a Superior Court judge ruled today.

His attorney, Russell Pray, told Judge John Gee Clark that Fonda is willing to defend himself in court immediately, but that he is unable to appear now.

7 Plane Plants May Adopt 10-Hour Day, Incentive Wages, to Curb Labor Turnover

Officials of seven Southern California aircraft companies who met recently in Washington have taken steps looking toward the installation of incentive wage systems and a ten-hour work day since their return to the Coast, it was learned yesterday.

Both measures are being considered as means of stabilizing their labor force which has been turning over at a rate in excess of 6 per cent a month. Both measures will have the effect of increasing the workers' "take home pay"—in return for more production—thus making aircraft employment more attractive.

Discussions are now going on between the company managements and representatives of the workers in all the affected plants, it was learned.

It was understood that WPB Vice-Chairman Charles E. Wilson requested the concerns to look into the possibility of adopting incentive wage plans and the longer work day as means toward increasing production.

The longer work day would replace the present 8-hour day, providing two 10-hour shifts each day instead of three 8-hour shifts.

At present, manufacturers are finding difficulty manning the early morning or "graveyard" shift, and do not get a full shift's production from it. By having two 10-hour shifts, the manufacturers hope to be able to maintain full working forces on both shifts. Such a plan could be tied into either a 50-hour basic week, spread over five days or a 60-hour basic week, spread over six days.

It is understood that one of the manufacturers is considering a plan to pay workers a bonus for staying on the job, while others are considering adoption of the type of incentive plan approved by the War Labor Board for the Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corp. at Bethpage, N. Y.

The Grumman plan calls for the payment of a 1 per cent wage increase for each 2 per cent increase in production, measured on a plant-wide basis.

Both the CIO United Automobile Workers and the AFL unions dominating the West Coast industry have recorded opposition to incentive plans as such, but the employers hope that they can persuade the unions to go along with an acceptable plan.

The War Labor Board has announced that it will not approve any incetnive plan that has become the subject of a dispute between labor and management.

West Coast companies considering the new program are the following:

metals, especially copper and coal.

Elsewhere along the Dnieper Front, the Russians scored other important successes, the Moscow communique said. With Berlin already hinting at a full abandonment of the Hitler winter line at the Dnieper, it appeared that "Stalingrad-type" battles for Melitopol, Kiev and Gomel were being waged principally to give the Nazis time to flee from the Crimea and the Ukraine.

The Russian communique said that north of Kiev the strongly fortified enemy strong point of Vyshgorod was captured.

South of Rechitsa, where the Soviet forces are heading into White Russia, they apparently extended their newly won bridgeheads across the Dnieper.

South of Gomel the Russians swept more Germans from the Dnieper-Sozh triangle, advancing several miles across the river in some sectors.

The war bulletin, for the first time in a week, failed to mention street fighting for burning and battered Melitopol, gateway to the Crimea, where the fighting presumably raged through its seventh day on Tuesday. The communique also said nothing of the Russian salient south from captured Zaporozhe, where a Soviet relief army had been heading toward Melitopol.

Clerics Told Of Community Mission Farm

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

A missionary farm operated on Jesus' philosophy concerning the brotherhood of man, and where whites and Negroes are partners, was pictured yesterday by Dr. Clarence Jordan, among the visiting speakers for the city-wide Baptist evangelistic drive.

Dr. Jordan, addressing the Federation of Churches' race relations committee at the Federation Building, 1751 N st. nw., told how the Koinonia Farms project in Americus, Ga., operates on these basic principles:

Brotherhood for all groups, regardless of race or creed; ownership on the basis of personal need and "life" investment, rather than capital investment; distribution according to need rather than greed, position or influence; and that the power of love is greater than the principles of force, hate or militarism.

In an interview with The Post later in the day, Dr. Jordan told how a year ago he resigned his position as supervisor for the department of missions of the Louisville Baptist Association, and, with Dr. Martin England, former missionary to Burma, started the project, now supported from voluntary gifts from all over America.

The community, still in its experimental stage, has 13 members. They are Dr. and Mrs. Jordan and their two children; Dr. and Mrs. England and their three children; Larry Fahy, 18, and Harland Harvey, 26, both formerly of Washington, and Demps Almond, 26, and Joe Johnson, 22, Negroes.

The word Koinonia means "community" or "fellowship" in Greek.

Dr. Jordan is speaking daily this week and next at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw. Other members of the visiting "team" are appearing at the other 29 cooperating churches at 8 p. m. daily. The Baptist preachers' breakfast sessions will be today at 8:45 a. m. at the Y. W. C. A., 614 E st. nw. Dr. John R. Sampey will speak over WWDC today at 12:45 p. m., and Dr. Jordan today at 12:15 p. m. over WRC.

Federal Bar Group To Hear Maj. Brown

Maj. Mary Agnes Brown, assistant to the executive officer of the Women's Army Corps, will address a luncheon meeting of the Federal Bar Association at Schneider's Restaurant, 427 11th st. nw., called for 12:30 p. m. today. Her subject will be "Women's Place in the War." Major Brown is a former attorney in the Veterans' Administration.

Mrs. Corinne Marcey Christens Tanker

Mrs. Corinne Marcey, chief telephone operator for the Maritime Commission and War Shipping Administration, yesterday christened the 16-500-ton tanker, Elokomin, at the Sparrow Point shipyard at Baltimore, the Associated Press reported. Matrons of honor were Mrs. Marcey's mother and sister, Mrs. Minnie E. Weeks and Mrs. Lucille Oshond, both of Washington.

A NEW BAND DEAL is sweeping the town in hurricane style. The Dubonnet Room will blossom out tonight with the slickly tailored dance music of young Eddie Fogel plus singer Tony Lanasa . . . Del Rio is rejoicing over the return of the velvety rumba rhythms of Carlos Molina, rated among the top-flight Pan-Am maestros . . . Davy Crocker, long a Washington favorite, will open with a new orchestra tonight at La Conga out on the Baltimore Boulevard . . . The Copocabana has a broiling hot new rumba band headed by Patt Montenegro with magnetic Anita Rabal doing the vocals . . . Out at the Metronome Room the younger dancing crowd has just placed the stamp of approval on the new Bill Grassick orchestra and its stylized versatility that swings adeptly from sweet to bouncy tunes, rumbas and delta rhythm.

Remember Angie Rodante, lovely black-eyed blues singer who used to be at Hi Hat? . . She's now the bride of Major John C. Hadley stationed at the Army Air Base, Barksdale Field, La.

HERE COME THE WARBLERS. Carole Page of the Monte Carlo Beach Club in New York, will open a singing engagement at the "Champagne and Orchids Party" in the Mayflower Lounge tomorrow night . . . Gertrude Bond, notable young singing comedienne, will join the show at Olmsted's Club next week . . . Princess Red Rock, full-blooded Indian beauty of the Ojibway tribe, is the singing mistress of ceremonies who heads the new Casino Royal revue.

TRICKS WITH VODKA. "Try my new vodka," said Matt Windsor of the Windsor Room, "I'll show you how it should be served." And he poured out a dose of Russian white lightning and sprinkled it with black pepper! No wonder the Russians are good fighters . . . The Balalaika has a vodka cocktail that they call "Black Eyes." Two black olives leer coyly from the bottom of the glass . . . For a vodka cocktail that's meltingly smooth, try "Mischa's Special" at the Troika.

Harold Nagel's Band at the Carlton is playing "Pistol Packin' Mamma" as a sam' . We ask you!

WALTER O'KEEFE, famed on the stage and radio, who opens at the Troika tomorrow night

Bandleaders' Backgrounds. Henry Daye and his Knights, now in the Neptune Room, were guest stars not so long ago on the radio show, "They Give Their Lives." . . . Bill Strickland of the Lotus is that rarity, a native Washington bandleader who's played here all his life (and always with fine success, thank you). . . . Mayfair's Dick Abbott was holding forth at the President Hotel in Kansas City for some months before he returned to Washington. . . Myles Hallett has been playing at the Cafe Caprice for nearly two years, but he's still strictly the "young man from Manhattan" type. . . . Felix Zimmer of Paul Young's has been the featured pianist in a number of places around town. He's doing a beautiful chore in his first maestro spot. . . Carl von Sickler of the Madrillon is a University of Maryland alumnus. . . . Roy Comfort, who plays at the Lounge Riviera's cocktail hour, is an avid baseball fans and asserts (listen to this!) that the Washington team is the best in the league regardless of the World Series . . . Treasure Island's Rocco Terrone was deluged with fan mail on his first coast-to-coast hook-up. That's why he has that nifty new audience participation program . . . Maestro Ralph Hawkins of Crossroads doesn't look it, but he's a papa . . . Ditto for Ray King of the Louisiana

Loving Lulu: Might arrange to meet you at the Windsor Room tomorrow. Can I bring my Aunt Nellie from Dubuque? Willie.

"Have Your Ration Books Ready, Please"

"To have your ration books ready," when selecting rationed items, is important

1. Know, in advance, how many blue, brown or other ration stamps you have, and how many you plan to spend today.
2. Do not select or order more rationed items than you have valid stamps to cover.
3. Be at home when the delivery boy calls, if you order by telephone.
4. Have the ration book needed, ready and waiting for him.

Understanding co-operation will avoid confusion and delay. It will be appreciated, too, not only by your retailer, but other buyers.

Mine, Factory Yield Doubles Since 1940

Federal Reserve Board Production Index Reflects Increases Caused by the War

The Federal Reserve Board, announcing a broad revision of its index of industrial production, said last night its new figures indicate that output of factories and mines has doubled since the beginning of the defense program in June, 1940, and has risen 130 per cent since the outbreak of war in Europe in 1939.

Revised to take into account effects of the war program on industrial activity and on statistical yardsticks used to measure physical output, the new index is intended to provide a more sensitive barometer of production.

It raises the seasonally adjusted figure for July from 203 under the former calculations to 239 and places the index for August and September at 241 and 243, respectively.

Source of Increase

The 36-point upward revision, the board said, "reflects principally sharp revisions in the figures for output in the chemical, transportation equipment and machinery industries, but there were important revisions also in certain smaller groups, especially nonferrous metals, rubber products and petroleum products."

Asserting that revisions were made primarily in factors reflecting output of war materials because measurements of customary peacetime products remained reasonably accurate, the board added:

"As a consequence, the revised index shows a larger proportion of industrial production for war purposes than was estimated on the basis of the old index. Currently about 10 per cent of industrial production is going for war purposes, including munitions and supplies used by the armed forces, exports under lend-lease and also the industrial equipment and materials produced to make these finished products.

70 % of Normal Civilian Output

"The remaining 30 per cent of total industrial output constitutes goods produced for civilians; this portion of the present greatly enlarged output, however, represents over 70 per cent of average production for civilians in 1935-39."

The board said, the index is a measure of changes in the physical volume of production of manufactures and minerals, and does not cover other types of goods and services nor reflect price changes.

Bond Holdings Of B.& L. Units Expand 7-Fold

By S. Oliver Goodman

A seven-fold increase in holdings of Government bonds by Washington building and loan associations was reported yesterday for the year ended September 30.

The 25 loan institutions had $17,983,685 invested in Federal securities at the end of September compared with $2,363,000 at the same time last year, according to a survey by F. Willson Camp, secretary of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League.

Total resources of league members aggregated $192,035,185 on the latest date, a new all-time high and an increase of $14,485,403 for the year. New share money gained $15,564,532 in the 12 months, bringing this item to a record peak of $171,363,624.

Investing and borrowing members of the loan associations now exceed 170,000, according to Mr. Camp.

Help for the Taxpayer

The 1943 edition of the Investors Tax Kit is now available without charge at the Washington office of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane at 815 Fifteenth st., n. w. Containing convenient work sheets, charts and explanations of latest tax law changes, the Kit is expected to prove as popular as last year's edition.

One of the Kit's features is a pamphlet entitled 'Tax Guide for 1943' which explains in detail how current tax laws affect the individual with particular reference to securities. A handy chart will help the Washington investor to determine application of capital gains and losses.

Utility Issue in Demand

A large syndicate reported an unusually heavy Nation-wide demand for 16 million dollars of California Electric Power Co. 3½s at 103½ and the issue went to a premium in unofficial transactions. Late quotations were 103⅝ bid, 103⅞ asked.

The recapitalization program of California Electric brought to the public markets 16 million dollars of first mortgage bonds, 3½ per cent series, and 40,000 shares of 5¼ per cent convertible prior preferred stock.

Proceeds, together with funds obtained earlier from the imperial Irrigation District for transmission facilities, will be used to redeem all outstanding first mortgage bonds and notes.

Undercover Move to Oust SEC Revealed by Roosevelt to Press

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt declared yesterday that there was evidence of an undercover effort in many parts of the country to get rid of the Federal Securities Commission.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke of a move to eliminate the regulatory agency in annoucing at a new conference that Edmund Burke, jr., had resigned his membership on the SEC and that he was nominating Robert K. McConnaughey to succeed him.

The Chief Executive said McConnaughey knows his stuff and would be an excellent representative on the SEC. He said the new member may discover a definite undercover effort to get rid of the agency and go back to that awful thing called the good old days.

The President, asked whether he could be more specific about the efforts of which he spoke, said he was merely providing a tip on something to look into. He suggested a scrutiny of the columns of certain papers for the last few months.

Burke resigned for what he termed family reasons, and his resignation was accepted effective at once. He had been with the SEC more than eight years.

McConnaughey has been in Government service for several years, although he practiced law in Dayton, Ohio, in 1937. Recently he has been deputy governor of the Farm Credit Administration.

Help of Allies For Lands Hurt By Nazis Asked

Destruction wrought in occupied countries by the Nazis should be considered United Nations' war expense and those countries, should be reimbursed, Anders Frihagen, Minister of Supply and Reconstruction for the Norwegian government in London exile, said here Monday.

Asked if that meant the United States and Great Britain should bear costs of reconstruction in Norway and other countries, or if outright cash payments should be made, the Minister replied:

"I think it should be a principle that expenses should be obligations of all the United Nations."

Frihagen painted a graphic picture of Nazi gangsterism at work in Norway.

The Nazis, he revealed, have wrecked the currency system of Norway, and brought the country to a point where the average Norwegian's ability to work is 50 per cent of normal through what he termed "simple starvation."

Manipulating finances, the Nazis have infiltrated in major Norwegian industries, absorbed capital belonging to persons living abroad, and plundered the Bank of Norway of more than 500 million dollars.

"Moreover," he declared, "the Nazis have mined every bridge, building and factory, ready to blow them up to make the country's destruction complete before they are forced out."

Despite the havoc and suffering Norway is experiencing the government-in-exile is solvent, he declared. It is meeting its current and past obligations, both in interest and instalments on loans.

"Further," he said, "we have created a greater navy today than we had before the war, and are fast building a small but strong army and air force to continue the democratic fight with our Allies."

Frihagen is here to arrange for postwar supplies and to discuss reconstruction problems with American officials.

He maintained that Norwegians' hatred of Germany is at such pitch that commercials relations, amounting before the war to 20 per cent of Norwegian trade, never would be resumed.

Saltonstall Orders Investigation of Acts Against Jews

Boston, Oct. 19 (AP).—Announcing that he had directed the Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Safety to make "an investigation of alleged hoodlumism in the metropolitan area," Gov. Leverett Saltonstall stated today that he was appointing a committee of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish citizens in a program to combat alleged anti-Jewish "incidents" here.

The announcement followed a two-hour conference with high State police and court officials and church heads. Saltonstall said the names of the committee would be released within 24 hours, and added that he had written Boston Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty, "to investigate the situation in Boston at once."

College of Pacific, Trojan Clash Week's Best

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The applause meter at the Touchdown Club hit a new high yesterday at the weekly luncheon. It was Lieut. Comdr. Jack Dempsey of the Coast Guard answering the bell as guest speaker when the introductions were over. He gave a walloping little speech.

POVICH

Dempsey hasn't changed much. He never did try to big-shot it. Perhaps that's why guys go for him. He insists on being a big, friendly former heavyweight champion of the world. Maybe that's why his popularity has worn so well It didn't wane even after his losing fights.

He said "Sure, Tunney licked me," even though that is still disputed by thousands who saw the long count at Chicago in 1937. "But I got a lucky break in that fight because a lot of my friends still think I won it. I didn't, but it's nice to have your friends think so. I'm glad I finished on my feet."

He said he was lucky to lick Luis Firpo in 1923. "They should have counted me out in that first round when Firpo knocked me through the ropes and out into the seats. He should have been the new heavyweight champion of the world. I would never have gotten back in the ring if some of my newspapermen friends hadn't lifted me back. I was lucky that night."

Cockiness almost cost him that fight, said Dempsey. "I underrated that big Firpo. I knew I was in good shape, because I had just gone 15 rounds with Tommy Gibbons. I thought Firpo was just a big boob, and I got careless. The next thing I knew, I knew nothing. Firpo clipped me in that first round and knocked me outside the ring.

"After the fight they told me that if that punch had been two inches lower I'd have never gotten up. As it was he didn't hit me on the chin, but under the eye. I had a headache for a month. I don't ever remember being outside the ring. I don't remember anything else that happened during the round. I woke up with Jack Kearns holding the smelling salts under my nose and pushing me out of my corner for the second round."

He said it was nice to have fighting instinct. "That's what we're trying to give the boys who come to us in the Coast Guard. The old confidence is a great help. It takes a pretty good man to lick a kid who thinks he can fight and wants to fight. With that kind of spirit, you've always got a chance."

He said he was glad he quit after the second Tunney fight. "He'd have licked me a third time, probably, and my friends wouldn't have like that. I quit because I didn't want to let them down again. Twice was enough."

The Touchdowners loved it as the big guy went on that way. Buck O'Neill, great good friend of the Old Mauler, rose to his feet to declare that "Dempsey is still the champ. I have never acknowledged those two fights with Tunney and I am starting a movement to have them expunged from the records." Applause.

Dempsey is 48 now. The Coast Guard people are nuts about him. At Manhattan Beach the old mauler teaches boxing, wrestling, hand to hand combat and disarming. He doesn't ask his kids to do anything he can't do himself. There's a flaming spirit at Manhattan Beach that Dempsey says makes it the more interesting to him. "Those kids will be all right wherever they land," he says.

There never was much doubt why the Old Mauler gained such a grip on popular imagination. He was the peepul's ideal of a fighting man. They liked the romance of his humble beginnings and early years. The hobo who rode the rods into New York and because the heavyweight champion of the world, a rough, tough tiger youth who could spot Jess Willard 50 pounds and beat him into submission.

Only a Dempsey could have survived those trying days in 1919 when he was tried for slacker charges. Strangely he came out of that trial with his popularity undiminished. When, a couple of years later, they matched him with Georges Carpentier at Boyle's Thirty Acres, he was again in a spot. Here was the alleged slacker in there against a French hero of the World War. But somehow, the American peepul didn't look at it that way. Their adulation for him increased when he knocked out Carpentier in four rounds.

It was something of the same situation in the two Tunney fights. Unlike Dempsey, Tunney was a World War veteran with overseas service. Yet there was no defection from the Dempsey ranks. When he lost the first Tunney fight, in Philadelphia in 1926, a huge segment of public believed their idol had been drugged. They still liked Dempsey.

He was probably the most popular loser who ever lived.

Sprained Ankle Reason

Bob Masterson Sat on Bench For First Time Last Sunday

Redskins' Veteran End Hadn't Missed Game Due to Injury in 13 Years of Grid Play

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

While the Redskins rolled up points against the Green Bay Packers Sunday in Milwaukee their captain, all-league end and star place-kicker, Bob Masterson, was on the bench, missing his first football game due to an injury in 13 years, through high school in New Jersey, four years at the University of Miami (Fla.) and six years with the 'Skins.

A sprained ankle had kept Big Bob out of practice sessions the entire week, but he was in uniform for the pregame practice, limping around on his painful, swollen and heavily taped right foot, the one which has accounted for more than 50 points after touchdowns, with few misses.

Masterson had asked Coach Dutch Bergman to use him the night before the game but Dutch's only promise was "I might if we need you badly enough." The Packer game loomed as the toughest of the year for the 'Skins, the hump game, as Dutch called it, and here the 'Skins were without the key man of the line.

Seemed That They'd Need Him

The Redskins scored in the first four minutes but when Joe Aguirre's try for the point after touchdown hit the crossbar for a miss, and what at the time looked to be a big point, it looked as though Masterson might have to swing that sore ankle at one of his specialties if the game reached the crucial point.

The pro champs roared back down the field and scored again and this time Aguirre kicked again for the point and it was blocked by the Packer line. Green Bay was offside, however, and Aguirre made good on his reprieve kick, and finally made it 3 out of 5 for the day. As the Redskins added another quick touchdown in the second period and put the game beyond Packer reach, Masterson was allowed to rest his ankle for the tough games ahead, but his streak was broken.

The ironic part about Masterson finally having been forced out by an injury is that the 220-pound wingman was hurt in the Brooklyn Dodger game just 35 seconds before the end of the first half. Masterson was about to bring down Dodger Pug Manders with a clean tackle when his cleats caught in the Griffith Stadium turf and Manders' full weight came down on Masterson's ankle.

They Thought It Broken

Bob thought his leg was broken and when Red Johnson, who resigned as Redskin trainer last week, felt inexpertly of Masterson's shin guard, thought it was his ankle and pronounced it a compound double fracture. Masterson thought he was through for good.

Close examination in the dressing room disclosed nothing more than a sprain, however, and Bob hobbled around for several days, with and without crutches. He took heat treatments and followed orders closely as with Jack Jenkins in the Marine Corps, Joe Aguirre and possibly Joe Pasqua, were the only other place-kickers. The Redskins felt they needed Masterson for his defensive ability, too, plus a target for Baugh catches. It just so happened the team played one of its best ball games of all time and Ted Lapka filled in admirably as a reserve and Masterson, against his wishes, rested.

In Through Error

The closest Bob ever came to missing a game due to an injury before was three years ago when he played 30 minutes—through an error. Masterson had been kicked in the small of the back the previous Sunday and the following Saturday a cyst formed and Dr. Robert Moran instructed Coach Ray Flaherty not to use Masterson the following day. Bob had the cyst drained, however, and dressed for play.

At the time Masterson was operating with the second and fourth quarter teams and at the end of a heated first quarter Flaherty turned to the bench for his substitutions, and although he meant to call out Bob McChesney he barked out, "Masterson," looking at one and calling the other, and Bob played 30 minutes without further injury.

'Skins' Smith Suffers Bruise, X-Rays Show

GEORGE SMITH

George Smith's bruised foot proved to be just that yesterday as Coach Dutch Bergman received a negative report on an X-ray regarding a break and the Redskin center is expected to be at his usual starting post Sunday against the Chicago Cardinals in Griffith Stadium.

Smith, Bob Masterson and Steve Slivinski did not partake of the late afternoon practice. Slivinski is believed to have a small bone broken in his wrist, but he had full movement of his hand last night and will not miss any time. Masterson continued treatments to his sprained ankle which kept him out of Sunday's game.

Andy Farkas was troubled with a stiff leg, a carryover from a nasty cut in the scrimmage with Bainbridge, but Andy is expected to shake it off before Sunday.

The Cardinals arrived yesterday and will hold daily workouts in the morning. To save train space and also hold down expenses, the Western teams will remain in the East this year when they have Eastern games on successive Sundays. The Cards lost to Detroit, 7-0, last Sunday in Buffalo.

Coye Dunn Assaulted, Suffers Broken Nose

Coye Dunn, Redskins second string quarterback from San Diego, suffered a fractured nose and lacerations about the head and face last night when turned upon by several unidentified Negroes back of Griffith Stadium.

Dunn went to his car after the Redskins' practice and caught his assailants in the act of breaking the windshield on his car. He gave chase and the Negroes suddenly stopped and one of them struck him in the face with a piece of iron pipe. Dunn staggered back to the dressing room where he was given first aid by Dr. Bohm, Redskin trainer. He returned to his home.

Navy Coaches Hope to Stop Tech Threat

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Oct. 19.—For the third time in Navy's football history the Tars will meet the "Rambling Wrecks" of Georgia Tech when the two teams clash in the last night game of the Middies' 1943 schedule this coming Saturday.

Though defeated early in the season by Notre Dame, 55 to 12, the Techmen appear to be no pushover for the Navy, and Tar coaches predicted today the game probably would be just as rugged as the Duke-Navy meeting of two weeks ago.

The Navy opponent has it that George Tech is sporting one of its finest lines since the great team of 1928 and Tar Coach Capt. John E. Whelchel is stressing the importance of stopping breakaway runner Eddie Prokop who played for Georgia Tech in the Cotton Bowl last season.

The Tech Yellow Jackets will also have the services of triple-threat back Red Broyles. In fact, Broyles may cause Navy's worst headache since his reputation is high in the field of punting, and the Middies have shown poor booting in their crucial tests with Duke and Penn State.

Navy's record with Georgia Tech was a 13-0 victory in 1922 and a 21-0 loss in 1942.

Meanwhile, Bob Jenkins was reported almost ready for a starting assignment for Navy as he left sick-bay at the academy and returned to the varsity first string today.

Jenkins and several other Tar gridders who have been nursing injuries sustained during the Duke battle will help Whelchel's offensive strength a great deal since Navy will need all of its 16 available starting backs to crush the "Yellow Jackets" who have shown real ability in downing North Carolina and Georgia Navy.

Like all football teams this year the Tech gridders are aided by the services of a V-12 unit. Everybody in the pigskin parade this fall has to depend on the Navy if they hope to produce a team other than 17-year-olds and draft-deferred players.

Billy Banks Wins

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 19 (AP).—Billy Banks of Washington, a 4-to-1 shot-ender, won Referee Dan Buckley's decision over Pedro Hernandez, high-ranking featherweight from New York, in an eight-rounder tonight. Banks weighed 129; Hernandez 126.

"Nice going," or words to that effect, says Lieut. Comdr. Jack Dempsey of the Coast Guard, to James Patrick Flaherty as he presents the Anacostia High School halfback with a war bond as the outstanding scholastic player of the week. The ceremony was held yesterday at the Touchdown Club, donor of the bond.

Penn State Gets First Taste Of 'T' in Terp Game Saturday

By the Associated Press

State College, Pa., Oct. 19.—Penn State's football team, at full strength despite four tough games in a row, will go up against the famed T formation for the first time Saturday at College Park, Md., when the Lions play University of Maryland, and the Nittany Lions are prepared for a hard battle.

Joe Bedenk, Penn State line coach who scouted Dr. Clarence W. Spears Maryland team in its West Virginia game last weekend, reports that the Terrapins are "much better" than the 6-2 defeat at Morgantown indicates.

"On a dry field I don't think West Virginia could have stopped the Maryland attack," Bedenk declared.

The play of Quarterback Joe Makar and Halfback Dick Tuschak of Maryland particularly impressed Bedenk. Makar, the veteran scout reported, is a good passer, while Tuschak bears the brunt of Maryland's running game. Both played strong games against West Virginia, Bedenk said.

Bob Higgins, Penn State head coach, was pleased with his club's showing against Navy, even though losing last Saturday at Annapolis, but he's looking ahead to Maryland and other teams on the State schedule.

"Of course, our squad put up a good game against Navy," Higgins remarked, "but it's time now that we started winning." After Maryland, Penn State meets West Virginia, Cornell, Temple and Pitt.

Irish Hold To Top Rank In Grid Poll

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 19.—Following the same mathematical formula that ranks Notre Dame as the Nation's No. 1 football team for the third consecutive week, Saturday's clash between Southern California and the College of the Pacific must be listed as the outstanding grid game this weekend.

It is the only scheduled meeting between two teams that are ranked in the first ten in the season's third weekly poll conducted by the Associated Press. College of the Pacific, coached by Amos Alonzo Stagg, manned by Navy and Marine trainees and paced by Johnny (Presto) Podesto, former St. Mary's star, moved up to sixth place this week after whipping the highly regarded Del Monte Preflight School team. Southern California is listed seventh.

While 98 of the 114 experts cast their first place votes for Notre Dame, which wasn't lower than third on any ballot and polled a total of 1075 points, the College of the Pacific drew four first place votes and 438 points and Southern California drew two firsts and 326 points.

Here's how the leading teams were ranked on the basis of 10 points for a first place vote, 9 for second, etc. (First place votes in parentheses):

Notre Dame (98)	1075
Army (5)	926
Navy	643
Purdue (1)	613
Pennsylvania (4)	568
College of Pacific (4)	438
Southern California (2)	326
Iowa Preflight	308
Duke	291½
Michigan	269

The "Second Ten" is composed of Minnesota, 182½; Southwestern of Texas, 71; Texas A. and M., 58; March Field, Calif., 45; Del Monte Preflight, 43; Texas, 41; Northwestern, 34; Colorado College, 16; Memphis Naval Technicians, 12; and Camp Grant, Ill., 8.

That seems to indicate that the Michigan-Minnesota tussle will run the Pacific-Southern California game a close second for the week's honors while Notre Dame and Navy may find some stiff opposition among the "also rans."

Notre Dame's opponent Saturday will be the improving Illinois team, which was mentioned for the first time this season and polled five points. Navy faces Georgia Tech, which earned 6 points.

Georgie Parks Meets Lane at Arena Monday

Heavyweights will take over the spotlight on next Monday night's weekly fistfest at Turner's Arena. Georgie Parks, the 21-year-old local contender, and Larry Lane, the Trenton Thumper, were signed yesterday for a 10-round headline bout.

Parks is fresh from a 5-round knockout of Nap Mitchell, huge Philadelphian—a victory that set the Washington scrapper right back into the boxing sun.

Lane needs little introduction. Last April, at the Arena, he all but beat Al Hart, the massive War College heavyweight.

Irish-Great Lakes Game Is Shifted

Great Lakes, Ill., Oct. 19 (AP).—The Notre Dame-Great Lakes football game, originally scheduled for Comiskey Park, Chicago, November 25, today was shifted to Great Lakes and will be played November 27 in Ross Field.

The field has a capacity for 22,000 Bluejackets. There will be no ticket sale and the general public will not be admitted.

La Chappelle Gets Crack at Title Tonight

A championship wrestling match is on the bill at Turner's Arena tonight, with handsome Yvon Robert of Canada, claimant of the National Wrestling Association title, defending his laurels against Maurice LaChappelle, the Flying Frenchman.

This is a finish match—Washington's first championship battle since Sandor Szabor, the Hungarian ace, risked his crown against Cowboy Luttrell at Riverside Stadium about 18 months ago.

Robert, although a favorite tonight, will find that LaChappelle is a very tough grappler. LaChappelle was in fine fettle last week as he flipped Nick Serio in 10 minutes with his airplane spin.

Some time before ring time Promoter Turner will select either Benny Bortnick or the 300-pound Tiny Rouque as referee.

The semiwindup promises to be full of action. Here George Macriostas, the Golden Greek, will take on Michele Leone, the Boston vallain. Macricostas formally has challenged the winner of the title bout, indicating he has lots of confidence in himself.

In other matches, the first starting at 8:45, the Blue Streak, a masked grappler, will take on Art LaGrande, Robert's stablemate; John Vansky will oppose John Melas, and Dapper Dizz will take on Bill Darnell.

Joe Gordon Issues Annual 'Won't Play Ball' Statement

By the Associated Press

Eugene, Oreg., Oct. 19.—Joe Gordon, New York Yankees' second baseman, said today he doubted if he would play baseball again next year, but his friends only smiled.

GORDON

For Gordon went on to say he intended to play basketball and handball this winter to keep in shape, just in case.

Gordon obviously was tired and discouraged over a long and not too successful season. Even his good showing in the World Series had not cheered him greatly.

Last year, after being the "goat" in the World Series, Gordon made similar statements, but turned up for baseball as usual.

He left today on a hunting trip into eastern Oregon for deer, bear, ducks, geese and pheasants.

Dunbar Plays Armstrong

Opening game of the District Negro Inter-High School gridiron championship series will be played at Griffith Stadium at 4 p. m. today between Armstrong and Dunbar High Schools.

Pre-interhigh competition between the District Negro schools indicates that the series will be an evenly matched one. Along with Cardoza, the other team in the series, both teams were developed from large squads and a wealth of first-rate material.

Armstrong and Cardoza have the greater number of experienced players left from last year's teams, but the scores all three teams registered against Parker-Gray High of Alexandria are indicative of the sort of battles to take place when the local series gets under way. Cardoza won, 24-0; Armstrong won, 26-0, and Dunbar won last week, 27-0. All three teams have won all of their out-of-town contests so far.

Coach McIntyre of Armstrong is counting on Ross and Harris as his backfield mainstays and on Mayo, Thomas, Stewart, Jones and Jackson in the line. Coach Pinderhughes of Dunbar has an equal number of standout players in Hall, Stratford, Clarke, Elmes and Jordan.

Horse, Pony Show At East Estate Set for Sunday

Indian Creek Trail Riders and the University of Maryland Riding Club will sponsor a horse and pony show and gymkanah Sunday at 10:30 a. m. at the East Estate, on the Greenbelt Highway one mile east of the Baltimore Boulevard.

Part of the proceeds will go to the Branchville rescue squad.

Four pony events five classes for the horses and four gymkanah classes will be included on the program, with a horse and reserve championship and pony and reserve championship.

Dr. Charles H. Mahoney, of the University of Maryland horticultural department, will judge the show.

Navy Game Tickets

Tickets for the Navy-Georgia Tech football game at Baltimore Stadium Saturday will go on sale at the Keystone Automobile Club and the American Automobile Association tomorrow, officials of the clubs announced yesterday.

This little freedom

ONE OF THE LITTLE FREEDOMS we must for a while forego is the freedom to feast.

For in times like these, the heaping of one plate might leave nothing for another—that's why needed things, being scarce, must be so distributed that all may share equally and alike. And the rules of rationing take care of that.

Things less essential are less restricted and the hunter may bag all he can find. But the rules of fairness say "don't buy anything you don't need."

That sense of fairness is behind the limit put on your purchase of IMPERIAL. Limiting the amount of IMPERIAL you may buy is done only because no more whiskey is being made today: every distillery is producing war alcohol. Stocks must be made to last longer than originally intended.

And the only way to keep supplying you with a little is to permit no one to have a lot.

In spite of the whiskey shortage there has been no change in the official price of IMPERIAL except for new federal excise tax in 1942...and OPA adjustments.

Jouett Shouse's Fifth Wins Pimlico's Monumental Purse

Kline Horse Disqualified In Sixth Race

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Md., Oct. 19.—Jouett Shouse's Fifth after getting away last, was first in the Monumental Purse, the outstanding offering on the Tuesday turf show here. Winner of his previous race in New England, Fifth held on with good courage to win by a neck from C. T. Chenery's Plucky Raider.

Third money went to G. R. Watkins' Portage Trail, a length and a half in back of the place position. A field of seven juveniles competed in the test of 6 furlongs.

Ridden by Jockey Johny Breen, Fifth returned a $6.70 mutuel after somebody loaded the machines to make him favorite in the early betting. His time was 1:15 1-5.

Plucky Raider appeared an hour the best, but was the victim of some poor riding on the part of Jockey Charlie Givens. He eased up early and had one horse beaten at the far turn. He then brought the colt to the outside and appeared to misjudge the timing of his final move.

The chief excitement of the afternoon centered around the sixth event and brought the first disqualification of the meeting. C. Mahlon Kline's Bright Argosy was first to the wire and closed a nose in front of J. R. Stanmyer's Pompous Fox. In the head and head stretch battle, Bright Argosy bore over on his rival repeatedly.

Jockey L. Haskell, who rode the second horse ran back to the inclosure to claim a foul. The stewards listened to Haskell and Jockey Jimmy Thornburg who rode Bright Argosy and then did the expected. Pompous Fox was declared the winner and Bright Argosy was shifted to second position, J. H. Watters' Alpine King was left in third position where he finished.

Bright Argosy should have been placed third, however. Alpine King bothered as much if not more than Pompous Fox, appeared to be headed for victory when carried out.

Pompous Fox paid $8.40 in the field of eight maiden 2-year-olds and was clocked in 149 4-5 for the mile and a sixteenth.

PressClubMembers Compete for Bonds

National Press Club members will compete in the twelfth annual NPC Golf Tournament today at Woodmont Country Club with war bonds and stamps offered as prizes in addition to the usual trophies.

Members and guests are asked to stagger the starting times and bring caddies, if possible.

The George R. Holmes Memorial Trophy will go to the low gross scorer with the American Automobile Association Cup, the Press Club Plaque and war stamps as other prizes. Handicapping will be left up to the individual.

Jim Preston, perennial champion, heads the committee, assisted by Fred W. Perkins, Al Steinem, Frank (Buck) O'Neil, Leo Freudberg and Sam O'Neal.

Sam Byrd to Succeed Demaret as Club Pro

Detroit, Oct. 19 (AP).—The Plum Hollow Golf Club announced today that Sammy Byrd of Ardmore, Pa., would succeed Jimmy Demaret as club pro. Demaret resigned recently to accept a new post at Houston, Tex., but he said today he had received 1-A draft classification.

St. Michael's Bows

The Georgetown Prep 120-pound team defeated St. Michael's School, 13-6, in a hard fought game yesterday. Keelan scored the Wee Hoyas' first touchdown in the second period, with Lewis converting. Keelan came through with another Georgetown score in the third period. Waldren went over for the only St. Michael's score in the final quarter.

WAVE SENDING SIGNAL

Thousands of young women of the U. S. Navy are helping to turn the tide in America's favor by stepping into shore jobs, so that more men can report to their battle stations.

Already the WAVES have released for sea duty enough officers and bluejackets to man a complete task force! They are doing man-size, full-time jobs at our great Naval Centers. A WAVE is just as much a member of the service as any man with the fleet.

As aerologists; in aircraft instrument maintenance; as storekeepers and mail clerks; as parachute riggers and pharmacist's mates ... in over 200 duties the WAVES are proving their mettle.

They are capable of operating Link Trainers, those amazing devices which teach future Navy pilots the principles of instrument flying. Large numbers are doing responsible office work, without which America's fleets could not function smoothly.

In a multitude of jobs the WAVES are making a splendid contribution to the Cause of Freedom. All honor to the women who increase the Navy's combat strength by serving their Country!

The Federal Diary

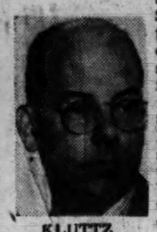
Oklahoman Candidate For Farm Security Job

Joseph Scott, president of the Oklahoma State Board of Agriculture, will be the next person to be offered the job of administrator of Farm Security. Meantime, it's reported, serious consideration is being given to a merger of Farm Security with Farm Credit despite the opposition of the White House to the consolidation. Agriculture officials have been tipped off that the Cooley committee which was set up in the House to investigate FSA will make a report soon in which it'll strongly urge the merger and outline in detail how it can be done. Moreover, it's said, the chances are excellent that Congress will approve the consolidation. The President is being urged to beat Congress to the punch.



KLUTTZ

Joseph D. McGoldrick, comptroller of New York City, will be appointed financial consultant to Leo Crowley at Foreign Economic Administration. He'll retain his New York job. . . . Bob Moore, who ladeled out patronage in Agriculture before the Ramspeck Act became effective, and who has been in charge of personnel relations more recently, has quit to take a job with the Democratic National Committee. Henry Shepherd has succeeded him. . . . Al Carretta, the Federal worker who is making a good race for a seat on the Ara rabbit coordinator as has been promoted at Office of Price Administration to the staff of Frank Marsh, in charge of field operations. . . . Agriculture isn't hiring a rabbit coordinator as hes been reported. In fact, rabbits are in the province of Fish and Wildlife Service and it has an experimental farm for them in California. And Fish and Wildlife has no plans to hire a rabbit coordinator, either.

The Ramspeck Committee will hold a closed meeting tomorrow to discuss its finding in the Army-Navy Electronics Agency. It'll decide whether to hold public hearings and expose the smelly activities of the agency to the public . . . A high-ranking officer in Army's Fiscal Office at 801 Channing pl. ne. yesterday got a deserved bawling out from headquarters when he embarrassed a group of employes who failed to meet their Community Chest quotas. The officer called the low-paid people into his fourth-floor office and called out the name of one girl who failed to give any money and the names of eight others who gave a dollar each. He implied that their excuses were no good. This officer's commanding officer is certain this horrible example won't be repeated.

It's official now; yesterday the Civil Service Commission informed Federal agencies that employes who resign without a release must wait 60 days before they can take other jobs, but the waiting period will start on the day the employes leave Government, and not when their annual leave expires. Employes are free to appeal to the Civil Service Commission when they are denied releases. Appeal should be made in writing to Fred Brown, chief of the War Transfer Unit, 808 E st nw. All Government positions are covered by the releases. There are no exceptions. However, you'll be given a release automatically if you're let out, no matter what the reason may be.

Nelson Rockefeller has assigned Tom Dozier to be his representative in Rio de Janeiro, but Dozier's draft board has refused to okay his leaving the country, as it believes he'll soon be called for induction Rockefeller has requested only a handful of deferments, but has gone to bat to get Dozier's draft board overruled. The job in Rio, he believes, is of vital importance . . . Lee Shugar, a leader in the National Federation of Federal Employes, is being transferred to Los Angeles by the General Accounting Office. . . . Charles Schwarz, Treasury's able press chief, has been commissioned captain in the Army and he'll go to the military government school at Charlottesville.

Agriculture has set up a committee to survey its manpower needs and to make plans for postwar demobilization. The committee, which will report to T. Roy Reid, personnel director, will make a list of all former employes who have reemployment rights with the department. The postwar readjustments will be tough on old-line agencies like Agriculture. Several of its units, like Farm Credit have more people who are entitled to jobs after the war than the number of jobs that now exist. Agriculture and other agencies are saddled with a large bloc of people who got other jobs with reemployment rights after the war instead of transferring to the field with their decentralized agencies. These people stayed here at their own convenience. Civil Service later changed its rules and people who transfer for their own convenience won't be given reemployment protection.

Bird 'at Bar' Interferes With Court

By Joseph Paull
Post Staff Writer

Whe Justice Matthew F. McGuire returned to his courtroom at District Court after lunch yesterday he noticed that the spectators, defendant and attorneys were all smiling and snickering.

That is somewhat unusual for Justice McGuire's courtroom, for he is a strict man so far as order in the court is concerned, and the justice uldn't figure it out.

Then suddenly a twittering sparrow flitted in front of him and flew up onto a chandelier, where it twitted some more, for having gained ingress into the room it now sought egress. Justice McGuire thought a moment and then announced:

"Can't Solve Problem"

"This is a problem I can't solve and I know this bird will be disturbing to the court. We shall adjourn to another courtroom while Mr. Sparrow is released."

As Justice McGuire left the room he informed his bailiff that the doors were to be locked and the windows opened wide. All visitors were to be excluded so the bird would not be frightened.

In due course—eight minutes to be exact—the bailiff returned, respectfully approached the bench and informed the court that Mr. Sparrow, left to himself, had escaped the custody of the court.

Defendant Guilty

Of this Justice McGuire informed a vastly pleased audience.

"They seemed more interested in the bird in the empty courtroom than they did in the bird at bar," said Justice McGuire later.

Incidentally, the "bird at bar," Clifford Grayson, 43, was found guilty by Justice McGuire of petty larceny and housebreaking. Prosecutor was Assistant U. S. Attorney Bernard Gargolina.

Advised of the illness of his mother, he had been delayed by inability to obtain plane reservations until after her death. He left today by American Airlines. His brother, Clarence Bergen, was with the mother when she died.

Auto-Trolley Crash Kills Chaplain

Streetcar Jumps Track in Collision Which Injures His Wife; Three Others

Total traffic deaths in 1942 ..108

An Army chaplain was killed, his wife seriously injured and three others suffered lesser injuries when a trolley car crashed into an automobile at 14th and Upshur sts. yesterday afternoon.

Killed was Lieut. Henry Goody, 26, Jewish Army chaplain, attached to headquarters of the 31st Engineers, Fort Belvoir, Va., and a native of Philadelphia, Pa.

Seriously injured was his wife, Mrs. Reba Goody, who is living at 804 King st. road, Alexandria. She is confined to Walter Reed Hospital with serious internal injuries and a broken right leg.

Others hurt were passengers on the trolley, all of whom were treated at Garfield Hospital. They were Mrs. May Randall, 48, of 1218 Kennedy st. nw., who suffered contusions to the back; Miss Gertrude Beavers, 30, of 4403 14th st. nw., whose knee was injured, and Louis Severe, 37, of 1317 Fairmont st. nw., who has broken elbow.

Lieutenant Goody was driving east on Upshur st. and crossing 14th when the trolley, operated by Walter Scott Huff, 52, of 1352 Kenyon st. nw., who has 18 months' experience, crashed into the car. The trolley was northbound.

Despite the fact that Huff told police he had locked all emergency brakes, the trolley jumped the track and, shoving the Goody automobile before it, continued for about 60 feet. The automobile finally swung to the side and the trolley then hit two parked cars and a tree before it stopped.

Huff said he was going about 15 miles an hour at the time.

Several other passengers on the trolley escaped injury. Goody was pronounced dead at 4:30 p. m. Trolley traffic on 14th st., during the rush hour, was backed up to the downtown district.

Lieutenant Goody was born in Canada and attended the University of Manitoba. After graduation he attended a theological seminary. After being appointed to the Chaplains Corps he attended the Chaplains School at Harvard University.

He was ordered to Fort Belvoir last June. The Army gave his previous home address as Greensburg, Pa.

Firemen Rescue Man Held Between Wall and Furnace

Firemen worked for almost an hour yesterday afternoon extricating Frank Somers, 36, of 103 Joliet st. sw., from a sub-basement boiler room of a new apartment house at 4600 Nichols ave. sw.

Somers fell about 30 feet from a ladder while climbing out of the place and fractured his left leg and wrist. He was wedged in a space between a furnace and a brick wall.

Hampered by close quarters rescue workers were hard put to get a temporary splint on the man's leg and arm. After first aid was given, he was strapped to a board and hoisted by ropes through a narrow opening.

He was taken to Casualty Hospital where his condition was said to be undetermined.

Victory Sidelights

Two Are Named to District Emergency Defense Posts

Appointment of John Klein, chairman of the wholesale food division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, as director of the newly established food supply unit in the Department of Civilian Defense, was announced yesterday by the Commissioners.

At the same time the Commissioners appointed Leon Chatelain, local architect, as director of the rehousing unit. Both units are included in the defense emergency welfare service.

H. C. Whitehurst, Civilian Defense director, explained the food supply unit would be responsible for the handling and distribution of perishable meats, poultry, butter, eggs and sea food during any emergency caused by enemy action and in addition that unit would initiate precautionary measures to prevent poisoning and sabotage in food establishments.

The rehousing unit will undertake the necessary advance planning for relocation within the district of people forced from their homes by enemy action. Chatelain announced that his unit would undertake an immediate survey in private homes of rooms which would be available for this purpose.

Warden Blames Papers

Newspaper criticism of surprise blackouts was blamed yesterday for the resignation of 3500 air-raid wardens in the city by Louis Colman, air-raid warden for the mid-city area, speaking before the Northern Seventh Street Business Men's Association.

Despite doubts expressed by some of his hearers that the figure was too high, he maintained they were accurate.

He said further that further unfriendly criticism would result in further defections.

As a result a resolution protesting further criticism by newspapers was adopted by the body. Copies will be forwarded to local papers shortly, it was reported.

First Aid Certificates

More than 200 members of the District Fire Department will receive their first-aid certificates tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Central High School auditorium in a ceremony arranged by the District Red Cross First-Aid, Water Safety and Accident Prevention Committee.

2000 WAVES to March

The first WAVE review in the Washington area will be held Sunday at 3:30 p. m. at Arlington Farms when some 2000 WAVES are scheduled to appear before Secretary Frank Knox and high-ranking naval officers.

The ceremonies will be held in front of Louisiana Hall. In case of rain, the review will take place in the recreation building, it was said.

Navy Week Begins

Navy Week begin tomorrow and will be celebrated with a dance for all naval enlisted personnel Friday at 8:30 p. m. at Uline Arena. Observance of Navy Week will culminate next Wednesday with a Navy Day dinner at the Mayflower.

Old Associate Of Dr. Ruhland Defends Him

Representative Hancock (Republican) of New York, who spent several years as a working associate of District Health Officer George C. Ruhland in Syracuse, N. Y., yesterday spoke in his defense in answer to a Senate District Subcommittee report last week recommending his removal.

The subcommittee recommendations came after an investigation of Gallinger Municipal Hospital, and likewise named for dismissal Commissioner Guy Mason, Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock, and two other physicians of the institution, Dr. Charles Cake, head of the tuberculosis department, and Dr. Joseph L. Gilbert, chief psychiatrist.

"I cannot permit the reputation of Dr. Ruhland has earned by outstanding service in the field of public health for many years to be ruined without saying a word in his defense," Hancock said. "I do this on my own initiative, without any request from him or anyone else, because I have known Dr. Ruhland and his work for 20 years.

Notable Record Cited

"Before coming to Washington, he was commissioner of health in my home city, Syracuse, N. Y. He held that position while I was corporation counsel of the city and he and I were closely associated in our official life. . . . City health records were vastly improved, and mortality rates were substantially lowered. We took pride in the fact that during his regime our infant mortality rate was lower than that in any comparable city.

"I haven't any doubt that many of the criticisms leveled at Gallinger were well taken. Public institutions are seldom administered as well as those under private control. If there is not a local board of good citizens charged with the responsibility of visitation and inspection, there ought to be. A voteless District cannot hold its public officials to strict accountability, but enlightened public opinion is an irresistible force."

Hancock added that "it would be the height of folly and rank injustice to victimize Dr. Ruhland, the extremely able health officer of the District, for a situation he did not create and has struggled to correct."

Bocock, Gilbert Defended

Meanwhile Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee received from 13 members of the Gallinger staff a letter upholding the work of both Dr. Bocock and Dr. Gilbert.

"After reading with consternation and painful surprise the report of the Senate District Subcommittee investigating Gallinger, we cannot allow certain charges and accusations (against the two doctors) to remain unnoticed," the letter read.

"We, therefore, wish to register with your committee our most emphatic protests against what we think to be extremely unfair and unjust charges . . . charges that would not stand up if scrutinized in the light of truth. And this is more evident when we consider that neither Dr. Bocock nor Dr. Gilbert was allowed to give in detail his own version of the situation . . . but on the contrary both were denied their request to devote one whole session each to describing and presenting a true picture.

The letter described Dr. Gilbert as "at all times courteous and humanitarian to all and highly sympathetic to their needs and sufferings." Dr. Bocock, it said, "sacrificed personal and family welfare in order the more devotedly to give all his time and energies to the institution and to the community."

CORRECTION

A story in yesterday's Post erroneously named Mrs. Windsor W. Demains, jr., of Alexandria as driver of an automobile which was in collision on Sunday with a bicycle, ridden by Garrett Sanborn, 10-year-old Alexandria newspaper carrier boy.

Mrs. Ernest M. Demains of 9 Rosecrest avenue in Alexandria stated yesterday that she was the driver of the automobile. "The child ran into my car, although I tried to avoid him," she said.

Mrs. Demaine accompanied the boy to the Alexandria Hospital in an Alexandria rescue squad car.

Mason Sends Apology to Senate Group

Commissioner Tells Why He Refused To Answer Queries In Gallinger Probe

Declaring that his refusal to answer questions before a Senate District Subcommittee investigating Gallinger Hospital was "far from diplomatic," Commissioner Guy Mason yesterday explained in a letter to the committee that he did not wish to pass judgment on officials whose fit ss for office he ultimately might have to determine.

The Commissioner, one of five officials whose dismissal was recommended last week by a subcommittee report, added "If by my statements or demeanor I gave the impression that I was discourtenous to the committee, I am deeply sorry and freely apologize."

Mason pointed ou that while the District Attorney was probing charges made in a report by the Comptroller General, the Senate hearings were announced.

Feared Prejudging Case

"The investigation had been in progress about a week when I was called as a witness," the Commissioner said. "The tenor of most of the previous testimony was critical of the management of the hospital by the superintendent and his staff.

"I honestly felt that it would not be proper for me to testify with respect to either their fitness or as to the integrity of the superintendent, or any other way be called upon to prejudge their cases, especially as they were, at that very moment, under investigation by the Department of Justice, with the possibility of grand jury action or criminal prosecution.

"I preferred to reserve the judgment until the district attorney had concluded his inquiry. Rightly or wrongly, this seemed to be the fair course to pursue.

Evidence Irritating

"Moreover, when I was called upon the stand, I was experiencing irritation at what seemed to be the grossly exaggerated and misleading statements of certain of the witnesses who had previously testified. Under these circumstances, and viewing the matter in retrospect, I am conscious that I phrased my reply in a manner far from diplomatic.

"I did not intend to be either noncooperative or defiant. Nothing could have been further from my thoughts. I recognized the right of the committee to inquire fully into conditions at Gallinger; indeed, I felt that a new partial investigation would be exceedingly useful.

"None of the individual charges of mistreatment (with the exception of general charges as to the situation in the psychopathic ward, which probably cannot be avoided with present facilities) recited before the subcommittee had been brought to the attention of either the District government or agents, to my knowledge, or to my attention prior to the hearing.

To Correct Conditions

"There were without question facts revealed before your subcommittee which call for measures of correction. It is my purpose to bring about such corrections.

"May I say that I have the deepest concern for the welfare of all of our public institutions, including Gallinger. It is my sincere desire to put into operation any constructive results that may develop from your investigation and deliberations, and I welcome your help and counsel.

"Respectfully,

"GUY MASON."

Concerning the letter, Senator Holman (Republican) of Oregon, chairman of the subcommittee, asserted that he had "no interest in Mr. Mason or in anything he has to say," and that as far as he is concerned, "the investigation of Gallinger Hospital is a closed incident; there will be no post mortems."

City News In Brief

Police testified in Traffic Court yesterday that an automobile belonging to Lee Bates, 39, Negro of Fairmont Heights, Md., had crooked headlights, faulty steering wheel, loosened rear wheels, no seat cover (the driver sat on springs) no floor board, and a faulty starter.

"Is that a car you have or a junkpile?" exclaimed Judge George D. Neilson in imposing a $25 fine. He also advised that the car be junked.

Maj. W. W. Watts, assistant counsel of the War Department Price Adjustment Board, will discuss the "Renegotiation of contracts as related to the Tax Program" today at 6:30 p. m. in the National University School of Law.

Nazi Double Talk Outdoes Itself

New York, Oct. 19 (AP).—The German news agency DNB, which has turned out many baffling military phrases—usually inspired by reverses—was quoted by the United States Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service tonight as describing an action north of Kiev thus:

"Parts of the attacking (Russian) formations were able to penetrate to the rear of German positions, but German tank grenadiers were able to restore the rearward communications by energetically reversing the fighting direction."

Canvass for War Fund Opens In District, Counties Today

House-to-House Calls Scheduled In 4-Million Drive

Householders in Washington and Arlington, Fairfax, Prince Georges and Montgomery counties will be called on today to participate in the Community War Fund's drive for $4,800,000 to finance 145 organizations caring for war-needy civilians and servicemen.

Throughout this week and next, house-to-house canvasses will be conducted by workers of the fund's Metropolitan division, whose part in the District-wide campaign was launched last night at a dinner rally in the Mayflower Hotel.

Representative Judd Is Hailed

Six hundred guests and volunteer workers of the Metropolitan Unit rose in personal tribute to Representative Walter Judd (Republican) of Minnesota, principal speaker.

Dr. Judd, a physician who before his election to Congress worked for several years among the people of China, delivered what fund officials termed "the most moving and meaningful" talk they had heard.

"The gifts we shall now send to the men we have sent out to break their bodies for our errors and ignorance," Dr. Judd told the group of fund-raisers, "to the Norwegians, the Greeks, the Poles, the Chinese, the other peoples living in terror—to our needy at home, so that this country may deserve the name of home to those who will return from war—these gifts we may perhaps give in penitence for our own 20 years of deliberate blindness to the retreat of tyranny.

"But our gifts say to them, 'Hang on! We're with you.' It is our opportunity to say to them that we shall keep for them their homes, their communities, their love of human freedom. For from us on the home front, they are drawing strength, morale and faith to fight the enemy.

"This Is Our Chance"

"This is our chance," he explained the purpose of the War Fund Drive, "to tell our men, faced by such an enemy, that the home front is strong, it is powerful with determination to back them, it keeps faith with our Allies."

The total raised in Washington by last evening was $1,738,000—36.2 per cent of the full quota, Herbert L. Willett, executive director, announced. "We shall reach and pass that quota," he predicted.

With the opening of the Metropolitan effort today, all four fund divisions go into full swing. Three of them, business and finance, advance gifts, and Government, have been working steadily since the beginning of October.

Business and finance already has obtained $366,000, or 27.1 per cent of its $1,350,000 quota. Advance gifts has $309,790, representing 56.33 per cent of the $555,000 it must raise. And the Government division, largest of the four, has subscriptions for $1,620,217 or 44.26 percent of its $2,400,000 goal. These figures indicate a 10 to 15 per cent increase over division totals announced on Monday.

"Four-Way" Report Session

Preparations for increased soliciting by the divisions are under way, in anticipation of the first "four-way" report meeting to be held tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. in the United States Chamber of Commerce "Hall of Flags." The over-all total collected so far is expected to spurt, with the initial announcement by the Metropolitan division of its two-day achievement among Washington householders.

However, should fund solicitors fail to contact each home, contributors are asked to call headquarters at Metropolitan 2284 for their pledge cards.

Participating in this phase of the campaign are prominent civic, religious and fraternal organizations in Washington, including:

Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, Burleith section; National Council of Jewish Women, Cathedral Heights; Young Women's Christian Association, Wesley Heights, Spring Valley; Children's Protective Association, Friendship; Christ Child Society, Calvert-Woodley; Episcopal Home for Children, Chevy Chase; Camp Fire Girls, West End; Florence Crittenton Home, Farragut; Junior League of Washington, Dupont Circle; Girl Scouts, Kalorama; Service Guild of Washington, Temple Heights.

Philadelphia Orchestra Plays Music by Respighi Capably

By Ray C. B. Brown

Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra on Tuesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: Suite No. 1 Antiche Danze ed Arie per Liuto (Ottorino Respighi), The Swan of Tuonela (Jan Sibelius), Billy the Kid Ballet Suite (Aaron Copland), Symphony No. 1 in C minor (Johannes Brahms).

Constitution Hall was crowded last evening in welcome to the Philadelphia Orchestra as it began its winter series of concerts, which have been an essential part of the city's cultural life for more than 40 years. It was a most cordial reception to a collective musical organism distinguished for its superbly animant tone and lithely articulated movement.

BROWN

Animant is an obsolete word, says the Oxford Dictionary, but it describes better than any other adjective the living quality of the Philadelphian tone. Moreover, it is a good word to be allied with Ottorino Respighi's first suite of "Antiche Danze ed Arie per Liuto" with which the program opened.

These freely transcribed tunes from the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, composed about the same time as "The Fountains of Rome," represent Respighi in his first phase as an anti-impressionist devoted more to structure and design than to color.

It is difficult to chose a favorite from the four movements of the suite. "Il Conte Orlando," borrowed from Simone Molinaro, and the gagliarda by Vincenzo Galilei are gay and lively dances with an infectious spirit. The villanella by an unknown composer is a lovely thing of wistful tenderness and gentle melancholy.

After this novelty, Eugene Ormandy used Sibelius' "The Swan of Tuonela" as a bridge to another—Aaron Copland's suite from his ballet, "Billy the Kid." The Finnish legend, so familiar to us all, was never given a more sensitive and evocative reading, and it is evident that association with this orchestra is ripening Ormandy's capabilities as a conductor. There are passages of fine atmospheric writing in "The Open Prairie" and "Card Game at Night," and these moments of posey go far to redeem the crass texture of the melodramatic parts.

Admirers of Brahms had satisfaction in the C minor symphony which constituted the second half of the concert. Those satiated with the Brahms symphonies were disappointed that Ormandy fell back upon standard repertoire

People With A-J Names Apply Tomorrow for Ration Book 4

If your last name begins with the letters A to J, application for War Ration Book No. 4 should be made tomorrow between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. at the school building in your neighborhood. Registration for Friday is reserved for those whose last name begin with the letters K to Z.

School authorities yesterday urged members of families who do not work to take advantage of the morning hours in order to avoid the rush of people just before the closing hour.

One person may apply for Book No. 4 for all the members of the family and in case of illness or temporary absence from the city, an individual can authorize a friend to secure Book No. 4. In both bases Book No. 3 completely filled out as to name and address must be presented at the time application is made. If Book 3 is not available it must be obtained from the local ration board before the new book, which will be needed beginning November 1 for rationed processed foods and sugar, can be issued.

The names and locations of public schools where books are obtainable tomorrow and Friday follow:

The Gentler Sex

On Managing Women

A great deal of hush-hush talk is going the rounds as to what factory foremen are saying of women workers. Oh, yes, the women are conscientious and dexterous and quick-minded and good on detail—all this the foremen readily admit in public statements and in interviews to the press. But in confidential conversations some of them are reported to be saying that if this war is ever over and they are free men again, the first thing they or their employers will do will be to send all the women "apacking."

Why? Because the women are driving everybody crazy with their rugged individualism. They won't obey orders. They smoke cigarettes where oil is. They won't wear caps over their hair and are in constant danger of being scalped by the machines. They waste too much time primping. They go out of the way to exhibit their charms and distract men workers. They lay off to get their hair "set." They gab, gab, gab. They gossip; they bear tales. They are continually getting their feelings hurt. They are fussy about little things. They are jealous of one another and have rows and spats. They are so personal-minded they keep themselves and associates in a perpetual state of emotional disturbance.

No foreman can be found who will sign his name to any of these charges. They are of course greatly overdrawn. However, it is generally conceded that industry has encountered a greater psychological problem in dealing with women than it ever had with men. Some concerns, including the Douglas, Lockheed and Vultee aircraft corporations, are meeting this problem by employing women counselors to wrestle with the social and emotional perplexities of the women workers.

One of the chief functions of these counselors is to listen, listen, listen. Just getting it all off their chests is a big help to the women—and the foreman is thus spared having to do the listening. These counselors help the women adjust their home problems and solve their emotional difficulties. Through the counseling services, factory absenteeism on the part of women has been cut materially.

In this and in other ways (such as improved facilities for food, rest and recreation) has the presence of women workers begun to humanize industry. This trend will probably be carried further after the war for by no means will all the women then be "sent apacking." Many will stay on in the light industries, and the numbers of those in the professions and in offices will probably increase. Consequently, the problem of "managing women" will continue.

Behave Better in Good Surroundings

Both employers and the women workers will benefit from the adjustments they will have to make. Employers will have to face the fact that women need only a little more acutely the things men have long needed—less noise and confusion in their working environment, less crowding, better ventilation, better food and rest facilities, more medical care, and more interest and understanding of their personal problems. Also employers are discovering that concrete returns can come from bettering working conditions. Women are particularly sensitive to their surroundings and already many cases of frayed nerves, irritation, and even insubordination have been cured by putting the workers in better physical environment.

Women on their side will have to achieve a better discipline of themselves, especially those women who enter offices and factories direct from the home where they have been "little Caesars' for so long. The personal and emotional attitude of women toward their work and their associates makes them as a rule more difficult employes than men—despite the inevitable percentage in every concern of men who are petty office politicians, gossips, talebearers, tantrum throwers and fussy "old women."

More and more in every commercial concern, and even in factories, are the virtues of tact and a tractable disposition emphasized by personnel directors. "Can she get along with people?" often becomes the most important question asked in hiring a woman. Girls who look toward a future in business or industry might well ponder this trend. For that matter, those who look to a future in the home might even better ponder it.

MEMO TO MISS BROWN

By Virginia Reid

SUBJECT:

Dear 'Bewildered'

Now don't you look at this, Miss Brown, with your well-acclimated, social-butterfly self in mind. It's your Johnny-come-lately cousin we're talking to, really, so just pass the word along. The girl who just got off the train with three suitcases, we mean, or the one who's been here three months without finding an interesting place to live or stimulating people to pal with.

You might call this the old stuff department, compiled especially for the girl who doesn't know the Mall from Griffith Stadium.

The girl without a room may not know it, but there are quite a few ways to avoid sleeping on a park bench. The National Catholic Community Service USO Club (the one for women war workers and Service women) at 1814 N st. nw. provides emergency lodgings for "Bewildered" and her ills and the Central YMCA at 17th and K sts. nw. also has rooms on a temporary basis. In case there aren't any available in the building, the "Y" conducts a room registry service and attempts to locate suitable quarters elsewhere.

The United States Information Service office at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw. (in addition to giving out facts on all subjects of interest to warworkers) houses a room registry also as a special aid to ailing shoe leather. As for the newly constructed dormitories for warworkers, the employe counselors of various agencies can tell her all about that—and many other things as well.

Having arranged for the material comforts of life, our new arrival may possibly begin to cogitate on social life (or her temporary lack of it). If she's smart, she'll begin making plans immediately to have an enjoyable winter in her new home.

Perhaps she's inclined toward becoming a USO hostess and taking part in the social whirl that's always going on in the local USO clubs. She may even be interested in man. Well, the procedure to follow in this case is to register with the volunteer office of OCD. At that time she can specify just which of the miscellaneous clubs she's most anxious to "hostess" in—and the OCD can put her wise as to which ones are where. Next step is to go to the club she favors (or call 'em) to find out when their next course of training for would-be hostesses is scheduled. Then she takes the course, is put on the magic list, and is "on call" from that day forward.

Incidentally, the Office of Civilian Defense may be able to suggest some other-types of volunteer work which would put her evenings to good use.

If it's just simple, uncomplicated companionship she craves, perhaps she'll find just the people she's looking for at the YWCA's Newcomers Night (Tuesday) or at some of the Y's other doings for warworkers.

The Phyllis Wheatley YWCA, 901 Rhode Island ave. nw., and the Hearthstone Club, 1703 Eleventh st. nw., specialize in making newly arrived Negro warworkers happily oriented to Washington life.

Then, of course, there's the Walsh Club for warworkers, which was organized especially for confused clerks and lonely stenographers, male and female. The club is located at the rear of 2118 Massachusetts ave. nw. and the furnishings, as well as the program, are exciting. Registration for any of the club's activities is from 3 to 10 p. m. every day.

The Jewish Community Center at 16th and Q sts, nw. offers a multitude of goings-on (modern dance, language lessons, swimming, lectures, and many more).

More things are doing at the various community centers operated by the District Department of Recreation—information available at Adams 2050.

The churches in Washington are doing a tremendous job of introducing warworkers to other warworkers (or Service men via parties, buffet suppers, youth groups and such. The Defense Commission of the Washington Federation of Churches (Decatur 3132) was especially set up to coordinate their activities and to give out information to our friend, "Bewildered." They will tell her where the nearest church of her denomination is located, what its young people are doing and how to join in the fun.

And if she wants to keep up on what's doing as she goes along, you might refer her to us!

Shoe Swap

Outgrown shoes are definitely injurious to child health. Foot deformities, awkwardness and poor posture very often caused by ill-fitting shoes. In as short a time as four weeks a child's foot may grow from one to three sizes larger.

Shoe swap centers are being established in many parts of the country with the blessing of the Parent-Teacher Association. When your child outgrows a pair of shoes he may then swap his for another pair that will fit him.

AMERICA MUST SAVE MORE FUEL THIS WINTER . . !

★ Say Government Authorities ★

Another winter of war for America finds the heating problem even more acute than last year. All the heat-saving measures you've ever used are again necessary. And you'll be wise to discover new ones. For the greater comfort of your family and as an important contribution to the war effort, every bit of heat must be carefully conserved.

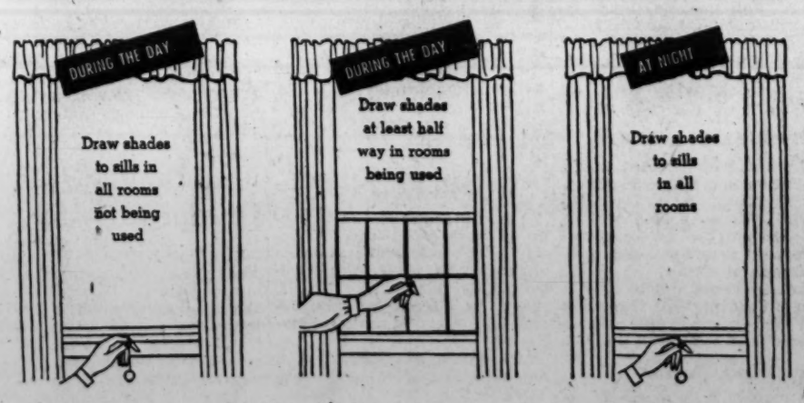
HEAT-SAVING HINTS EVERYONE CAN FOLLOW—

Close doors quickly when you enter or leave the house. Put a rug against bedroom doors at night. When ventilating rooms, turn off heat and close doors to keep cold air out of other parts of the house. Close fireplace damper. Keep heating plant and heat pipes free from soot.

30% of all heat loss goes out the windows

By proper use of your cloth window shades you can reduce heat loss through glass panes by as much as one-third and thus save up to 10% on fuel. Scientific tests conducted by the Armour Research Foundation have convincingly proved this fact. A drawn shade creates an insulating dead air space between the shade and the pane.

USE YOUR CLOTH WINDOW SHADES THIS WAY



DURING THE DAY
Draw shades to sills in all rooms not being used

Girl Wonders If It Is Advisable to Confess To Man Overseas, Who Thinks She Loves Him, That She Plans to Wed Old Sweetheart in Spring

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Early in the summer of 1942, I met a Lieutenant at a dance and for the next few months we saw each other rather frequently. During that time I did not go out with anyone else and we had some wonderful times together. I thought I was in love with him; and he proclaimed his love for me,—and still does. He was sent to another part of the country before I returned to college; and when we parted I promised him I would wait for him. Now he is overseas and I realize that while I have great affection for him, I am certainly not in love with him.

Last Spring I started dating a young man I have known practically all my life. I had always been extremely fond of him, and shortly after we started going steadily, I realized that he was the person I loved more than anyone else on earth; and since that time we have made plans to be married early next Spring. Meanwhile, I am still receiving ardent letters from the Lieutenant, although I have been writing him in an increasingly casual manner. I have refrained from telling him of my marriage plans, because of his present situation,—I mean, being in love with me, and in daily danger, with the problems of war weighing heavily on his mind.

Do you think I should tell him pointblank of my approaching marriage now, and run the risk of hurting him terribly (since he is very sensitive)? Or should I continue writing to him in a friendly fashion, as I have been doing,—waiting for a more normal time in which to tell him? I should greatly appreciate some of your sound advice in the matter. C. L. N.

Keep Relationship Abreast of Truth

DEAR C. L. N.: The situation in which you find yourself is not without precedent in this war period. Indeed, such "changes of heart," following sooner or later on the heels of such romantic meetings and partings, have become somewhat of a commonplace in the younger generation's experience. And, judging by one "story from life" I have heard,—concerning "what happened" when the girl's sentimental solicitude kept her from telling the soldier who had gone overseas that she knew she didn't really love him, after thinking things over in objective retrospect,—judging from that story, it appears that the decent and wise thing to do (from every point of view) is to keep the record of the relationship abreast of truth. In other words, to let the man know (as tactfully as possible) that you do not love him, and have relinquished "serious intentions" in regard to him,—as soon as you have definitely arrived at that conviction.

Truth so harsh is very painful to impart in any circumstances, we all agree;—and it seems an especially cruel (and almost unfair) thrust to deal to a fighting man far from home, whose basic morale is apt to be dangerously disturbed by the desolating pronouncement. However, to withhold the truth due to sentimental cowardice,—or in a mistaken attempt to spare another human being one of those spiritual tests-of-strength which each individual must undergo, if he is to find himself a mature personality at last,—is likely to pave the way to a more tragic crisis even that the first, that one had thought to detour around. For instance, to briefly sketch the super-tragic denouement (not yet resolved) in the case of the girl whose story I heard: She, too, met and briefly "romanced" with a service man before he went overseas. They assured each other of their love; and it was mutually understood that she would wait for him. But the girl came to realize, not long after he left, that she didn't really love him; never had and never could. She wasn't being fickle, or she wasn't seeing other men at the time. It was simply a matter of coming to her senses and seeing, in retrospect, that she had attached undue importance to a mild infatuation. For her, the romance was definitely "over." But she decided that in kindness (as she thought) to the man, she wouldn't tell him how she felt until he returned. They continued to correspond; but she began going out again with other men, writing him cheerfully about her social activities and new friendships.

Story From Life Points a Moral

Then came news that the man overseas was badly wounded. He was shipped home to convalesce. He had lost one leg and his features were scarred. He spent some time in a military hospital and is now returning to civilian pursuits. And his mother, who had been only vaguely courteous to the girl befor, is proceeding aggressively to proclaim her as his fiancee and her future-daughter-in-law. It is understandable, I suppose, that the mother would want to guarantee her son all the happiness in her power to provide;—and she had known he was in love with this girl and once hoped to marry her. But the girl finds herself in an intolerable position,—lacking the "toughness" to tell the man or his mother the long-standing truth at last, partly out of compassion for the man; and also because she is wretchedly certain they will think she is meanly "backing out," with a falsified excuse, on account of the man's disfigurement. She wonders if she has a right to add that crushing ugly suspicion to the man's present load of melancholy. And yet she feels she MUST not let herself be railroaded into marriage to him.

So there is the situation as it stands today,—a situation that developed because she lacked the courage to tell the man the truth about her feelings, as soon as she knew the truth. Does it answer your question? I think it should. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Committee to Meet Here To Create Cultural Center

Officials from Six Latin-American Republics To Open Conference Sessions Tomorrow

That America is destined to carry the cultural torch which the Axis blight has obliterated in Europe is seen in a new intellectual cooperation movement having its center in the Western Hemisphere.

Six republics of the Americas—in addition to the United States—Cuba, Mexico, Brazil, Chile, Uruguay and Argentina represent the Western Hemisphere on a committee meeting in Washington to form the International Center of Intellectual Cooperation. This center is to replace, for the emergency, the original organization, the International Institute of Intellectual Cooperation, created by the League of Nations 20 years ago.

The opening session of the conference will be held at the Pan American Union tomorrow at 10 o'clock. This will be followed by other meetings at the Carnegie Endowment Building, where blueprints will be drafted and a center for the new organization designated while other more specific changes—increasing inter-American cultural knowledge and several phases of postwar education—also will be considered.

Institute Originated In France

When the great French philosopher, Andre Bergson, expressed his concern that only government and political interests were represented in the League of Nations and not the moral or cultural progress of the people, the International Institute of Intellectual Cooperation was created, functioning from its center in Paris.

For the last 20 years it has brought together and disseminated great thoughts of the world—in literature, in art, in sculpture, science, music and other educational fields. Commissions of the American republics composed the Inter-American Congress of Intellectual Cooperation, which has held two meetings, one in Chile in 1939 and the second in Havana in 1941. At its Havana meeting the congress passed a resolution providing for the creation of a new international center.

Distinguished men of the Americas, internationally known, are among the seven members of the committee. Chairman is Miguel Ozorio de Almeida of Brazil, a widely known physician and president of the Brazilian Committee of Intellectual Cooperation. Cosme de la Torriente, Cuban lawyer and diplomat, was Ambassador to the United States in 1923, president of the permanent Cuban delegation to the League of Nations for a number of years and president of the Fourth Assembly of the League of Nations in 1923. He also served as member of the Permanent Court of The Hague.

From Mexico, Alfonso Reyes brings a full diplomatic background to the committee, gained in posts in France, Spain and Argentina and other special foreign missions. He served as delegate of the University of Mexico to the International Congress of Sociology of Turin in 1921 and was Ambassador to Argentina in 1936-'37.

Former Uruguay Envoy On Committee

Julian Nogueira of Uruguay, former Minister of Uruguay and assistant secretary of the League of Nations; Victor Lascano of Argentina, Minister to Havana and head of the Argentine Committee of Intellectual cooperation, and Francisco Walker Linares of Chile, distinguished professor and writer, are other members.

Additional distigushed representatives attending the conference will include Herminio Rodriguez of Cuba, committee secretary and lawyer in the international field in Havana; and technical experts—Dr. Luis A. Baralt, professor and playwright, of Havana; Malcolm Davis of the United States, Antonio Castro Leal, diplomat, professor and writer of Mexico; Mariano Brull, Cuban writer and Counselor of the Cuban Embassy in Washington, and Robert Valleur of France, professor of French literature at Columbia University.

Among the festivities planned in honor of the members of the committee are a luncheon to be given by Dr. L. S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union; one to be given by Charles Thomson, chief of the division of cultural relations of the State Department, and another by the Cuban Ambassador.

Loudon, in terms of the enlarged United War Relief Center now being planned to include 12 of the foreign war relief societies which are local members of the Community War Fund. The current War Fund campaign, as a matter of fact, has priority call upon the time and effort of Mme. Loudon and other leaders of these groups during the month of October.

Occupying prominent seats will be 26 young Oklahomans who are now patients at Walter Reed and the Naval Hospital. The boys, members of the Army, Navy, Marines and Coast Guard, are to be the guests of Mrs. J. George Wright, who also hails from the Sooner State. French Newcomer Finds New York Delightful

Mme. Hopponot, Wife of French Representative Here, Considers Manhattan a 'City Alive'

By Peggy Preston

You've heard it a million times, probably said it yourself . . . "New York is all right for a visit, but I wouldn't want to live there."

But not so the case with Mme. Henri-Etienne Hopponot, much-traveled newcomer to these shores and the wife of the recently appointed Representative of the French Committee of National Liberation in Washington.

The pretty-gracious Mme. Hopponot puts the thronging, noisy Manhattan at the top of her list of American enthusiams. "New York is a city so very much alive. It has a character all its own. I would like to live there," says the Paris-born diplomatic wife who spent six months in the metropolis before coming to Washington just three weeks ago.

MME. HOPPONOT

And she holds to this opinion, despite the fact three of those months were spent in a hospital. An ear injury, sustained during a high altitude flight over the Andes, caused a chronic illness last spring and detained the arrival of Mme. Hopponot in Washington for several months.

Has Many Friends In Washington

The charms of New York to the contrary, Mme. Hopponot is delighted with the prospect of sharing a tour of duty in the Nation's Capital with her husband. They have many friends in the city and have been busy with pleasant reunions since their arrival.

For the present they call a Wardman Park Hotel Apartment their home. However, like thousands of others in Washington, they are looking for a house. Since their furniture and possessions remain "interned" in their Paris apartment, it must be a furnished house, preferably containing a piano. Both M. and Mme. Hopponot are musical-minded and in their journeys around the globe have made a point of studying local music lore.

Still something of a convalescent, Mme. Hopponot currently spends most her time in her apartment, reading and studying American history and literature. Already she has sought out a lending library and is enjoying such thoroughly American books as "Gideon Planist" and others of that ilk. Three daily local newspapers keep her up on news of the day and also, she points out, improve her knowledge of English.

Couple Has Lived In 12 Countries

Directly before coming to Washington, M. Hoppenot and his wife lived some months in Argentina. Prior to that he held the post of Minister to Uruguay. In the past 20 years this globe-traversing pair have been stationed in 12 different capitals, including Bern, Berlin, Santiago, Beirut, Teheran and Peiping. The last named is their favorite station and one they plan to return to after the war.

They have not seen their native Paris in several years. Their only child, a 20-year-old daughter, is still there, having been attending school in the city when war broke out.

First postwar resolution for Mme. Hopponot: "To return to Paris and fetch my daughter . . . and to see what the Nazis have done to my apartment."

Mrs. Bruce Wallace Gives Small Tea

Saifullah Khandan, Mrs. Wrisley Brown and Mrs. James W. Murdock.

Comdr. Herbert C. Parker, USNR, and Mrs. Parker entertained informally yesterday after 6 p. m. in their apartment at Winthrop House.

Snra. Palencia To Lecture on War Refugees

Invitations have been issued by the Ambassador of Mexico, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, for a lecture to be given by Senora Isabel de Palencia on Friday evening at 9 o'clock in the Hall of Flags of the Pan American Union.

Senora de Palencia's topic "Refugees in Mexico" is one which she knows well, for like her husband—the distinguished painter, playwright and ex-diplomat, Ceferino Palencia, whose works are now being exhibited at the National Museum—she is a native of Spain, now residing in Mexico. The lecturer's career is an interesting one both in the field of art and in that of public life and she has been considered one of the outstanding living women of Spain.

Authority on Folk Arts

Interested in popular Spanish arts since early childhood, she made a special study of regional costumes of her country and gradually widened her field until she became a world-wide authority on folk arts. President Masar recognized her work on the popular crafts of Czechoslovakia by awarding her the White Lion decoration, and she was also made a member of the Cadiz society of Arts and Letters for her proficiency in the domain of art.

Not less outstanding in public life, Senora de Palencia has been a member of the Spanish Parliament and a delegate to the Assembly of the League of Nations and to the International Labor Office in Geneva, and also a member of the Committee of Experts on Slavery Questions. From 1936 to 1939 she was Minister Plenipotentiary to Sweden and Finland from the Spanish Republic, one of the very few women in the world to have reached such an important post in diplomacy.

Toured U. S. Before On Lecture Series

A great traveler, Senora de Palencia comes now to the United States for the fifth time. In 1925 she made a tour of this country lecturing on the arts and crafts of Spain. In 1936 and in 1939 she toured the country again, giving lectures this time, for the Loyalist cause. For the last four years she and her husband have been making their home in Mexico where she has become very interested in the study of folk arts, and is now considered one of the foremost authorities in that field.

It is on Mexico and on the generous way in which it has opened its arms to refugees like her, that Isabel de Palencia will lecture on Friday at the Pan American Union. Senora de Palencia will speak in Spanish. The program is open to the public.

Hope Ridings Miller

About Washington . . .

POLITICAL PATTER echoing from Pennsylvania and gathering teacup currency in Washington has it that the man who will be the Republican candidate for President in 1944 is Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts. He hails from the Keystone State; still has a farm there; goes back every summer; and has more friends in both parties—and fewer powerful enemies—than probably any other prominent Republican. "He's definitely the man to watch from now on out," a prominent Pennsylvanian visiting in Washington observed the other day. "Fact is, he's the only one all of us will ever be able to agree on. Roberts of Pennsylvania and Warren of California—that's what the ticket will be."

Also from Pennsylvania comes word that William C. Bullitt's candidacy for the Philadelphia mayoralty is getting nowhere at all. Seems it has suffered an obvious setback since publication of a devastating pamphlet entitled "Who Is William C. Bullitt?" Since it is issued by the Republican Central Campaign Committee, it presents—as would be expected—a highly unflattering picture of the former United States Ambassador to the Soviet Union, and more recently, to France. It may be, patently, Republican propaganda and only one side of the story . . . but it's mighty potent.

Far as I can make out, the two chief faults the Republicans have to find with Mr. Bullitt is that he hasn't spent much time around Pennsylvania in recent years . . . and he likes to serve champagne at his parties. Page 2 of the pamphlet outlines important happenings in Philadelphia since 1916 and points out that Mr. Bullitt was thousands of miles away each time.

His party-giving proclivities are played up in detail. Here's an excerpt:

When he first reached Russia, Bullitt became a Soviet idol. He taught Russian army officers to play polo. His parties eclipsed in bizarre splendor even those given by the rich Red officials. In Moscow, they still talk of the party he threw at which he obtained the loan from the Zoo of birds and animals. Bears and mountain goats were in cages in the ballroom, and a trained seal served champagne from a glass balanced on its nose. As a party giver, the first Ambassador was an unqualified success, no matter what his shortcomings as a diplomatic representative.

Here's another that just gives you an idea of the line of talk being used against Mr. Bullitt:

Having failed in the effort in 1938 to foist the troublemaking playboy contributor upon the Democratic party in Pennsylvania as its candidate for Governor, the Administration at Washington was more successful in saddling the party with Bullitt's candidacy for the mayoralty . . . The brain trusters in Washington showed characteristic arrogant disregard for the spirit if not the letter of the laws governing such candidacies. For if William C. Bullitt is a legal resident of Philadelphia—if he complies with the legal requirements for a candidate for mayor, he does so only technically.

Close friends of Mr. Bullitt howl loudly that the Administration urged him to run for the mayoralty but is failing to give him proper support. The Republican reply to that is—no matter how strong the support might be, the current Democratic candidate could never win the race. Nor for that matter, any other Democrat . . . this time.

GOVERNOR OF OKLAHOMA and Mrs. Robert Kerr will probably have to take time off for a rest cure after the strenuous round of fetes honoring them on their current visit to Washington. Yesterday, they were guests of honor at a luncheon given by members of the Oklahoma congressional delegation in House Speaker Sam Rayburn's private dining room on Capitol Hill. Later, they shook hands with a number of guests at the tea given for them by Mrs. Gladys Tillett, assistant chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Miss Lorena Hickok, executive secretary of the women's division of same. Receiving with the hostesses was Mrs. George Mesta, native Oklahoman, to whom much of the credit for the round of fetes on Monday evening should go.

Incidentally, a high point in the Monday evening calendar featuring Governor and Mrs. Kerr was their appearance on the stage of the National Theater following the opening Washington performance of "Oklahoma." Mrs. Kerr took a bow, and the Governor with a fitting speech represented to members of the cast the Oklahoma State flag. Mention of the hit musical show reminds me—I have only one fault to find with it—it's not named "Texas." It could be . . . just as well.

DID YOU KNOW . . .

That Constance Dudley Casey, wife of the former Representative from Massachusetts, ran for the New Hampshire State Legislature just after she finished college and almost got there?

That a newly formed WAC troop in Alabama will be named after Henrietta Hill, wife of the Senator from Alabama?

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Fred Astaire, Joan Leslie Fall in Love at Keith's

A LITTLE CLOSER APPROACH to straight comedy-romance than Fred Astaire is accustomed to make in his cinematic frolics, "The Sky's the Limit," now on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, comes most vigorously and engagingly to life in its superfine song and dance numbers, which many, no doubt, will deem too few.

There is not a suggestion of either song or dance until the amiable and leisurely little charade has progressed sufficiently to indicate that the Flying Tiger, on brief leave in the States, is going to become inordinately interested in the pert night club photographer, laboring for the Eyeful Magazine, published by Robert Benchley. Mr. Benchley, as a source of much of the picture's most effective comedy, already has a more or less valueless head start in his crusade for the young lady's affectionate attention.

The story is given sharp point only by the fact that the vacationing flier's real identity is kept secret, from all but the audience and a couple of his pals, until the last blazing moment under the big bomber's wing, just as he is about to take off presumably to double his score by bringing down a dozen or so more Jap Zeros. Up to then, he has been assiduously engaged in dodging the jobs Joan is so eager to get him because she thinks he wants them, instead of her.

Once Freddie Slack's Orchestra begins to tootle in the night spots and at the Stage Door Canteen, the discontented lens gal, who aspires to more important assignments, surrenders to her urge to sing and dance and discovers that the strange lad who is always practically as close as her shadow is a bit on the torch-song-and-taps side himself. Things are pretty sprightly from then on. There can be no gainsaying that Joan Leslie is the most adept dancing partner Astaire has had since the gay days of his partnership with Ginger Rogers. Miss Leslie doesn't merely go through the motions. She really dances—and extremely well. Also between the two of them, no harm at all is done such songs as "Shining Hour," "We've Got a Lot in Common" and "Once More for the Road." The hit of hits, however, is scored by Astaire in his solo and slightly inebriated tap dance atop the bar, when all seems bleak and barren and Mr. Benchley "in." Mr. Astaire smashes a lot of expensive looking glassware in this one, but gracefully and in perfect time!

Comedy Is Skillfully Managed

"The Sky's the Limit" is played quietly and with great deftness by all concerned. Mr. Benchley takes time out at the banquet to the airplane tycoon—who is supposed to give Fred a job but, instead, takes a lesson in airship design from him—to deliver another of his inimitable blackboard talks, fashioned after the pattern of his original "Treasurer's Report." His explanation of the various charts and graphs is a model of complete bewilderment. Elizabeth Patterson and Eric Blore appear effectively in the merest of fleeting flashes and others of like standing, including Edward McNamara, are cast in the briefest of "bits." The production is nicely gauged to the spirit and proportions of the story and Edward H. Griffith's direction, as we were saying, is leisurely, but effective in emphasizing the drollery of many situations.

The supplementary features of the new bill at Keith's are interesting and well selected. "Suggestion Box," a new War Information release, stresses the value and importance of time, labor and money-saving ideas, advanced by workers in our war plants, many of which, one would think, management would have hit upon before them. A humorous lesson in brotherly love is expounded in Walt Disney's color cartoon comedy, "Figaro and Cleo," the pithy story of a kitten and a goldfish. The Pathe News is the final auxiliary of the unpretentious and enjoyable feature.

Dots and Dashes

The "Heart of Variety" committee of the Washington Variety Club, under the chairmanship of Rudolph Berger, has recently completed the furnishing and equipment of a room at Garfield Hospital, dedicated to the memory of the late Eddie Keller, formerly treasurer of the National Theater, who died not so many months ago at the premature age of 50 . . . A fine tribute to a fine fellow . . . Warner Brothers' film version of Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" will be presented for a five-day run at the Hyattsville Theater, beginning Sunday, October 24 and continuing through the 30th . . . Daily performances will begin at 5:15 p. m., to make posible three showings of the picture nightly . And out on Masschusetts Avenue, extended, the Apex Theater will be presenting a de luxe double bill on Friday and Saturday of this week, with Disney's "Fantasia" and "The Reluctant Dragon" hooked up on the same program . . . The aim is to shatter the house record previously established by a combination of Disney's "Dumbo" and "Bambi" as a duplex attraction. . . . Might do it . . . Tonight at 9, a program of Danish folk dances and tumbling acts will be presented in the Stage Door Canteen by the Legation of Denmark as a contribution to the United Nations Embassy Nights series, currently being presented at the Canteen . . . Also in the running will be the program featuring a line of tap-dancing girls and other entertainers who have recently appeared at nearby service camps, to be presented Sunday night at 8:30 in the Phil Hayden Studios on Dupont Circle . . . Especially invited are girls interested in qualifying for the dancing line.

Playbills for the New Week

James Cagney plays a battling tramp reporter in "Johnny Come Lately," next film at the Palace. Locale of the story, from the Louis Bromfield novel "McLeod's Folly," is a small Western town where, about 1906, a crusading woman editor puts up a fight against the town's political machine. Cagney as the paper's leading reporter; Grace George, as the editor; Marjorie Main, Marjorie Lord, Bill Henry, Hattie McDaniel, George Cleveland and Margaret Hamilton comprise the cast. Opens Thursday.

Metropolitan

The new stage bill is a "Salute to the Navy," with Wini Shaw, Sharkey the Seal, Billy Welles and the Four Fays, Lischeron and Adams dance team, the Ben Yost Quartet and Sam Jack Kaufman's world premiere of the Naval Air Corps song, "Anchors in the Sky." Hollywood, Oct. 19.—Maureen O'Sullivan's excuse for not doing camp shows is cute. Says she: "I have two children, without nurse or maid. Who says an actor can't keep a secret? In 1936 Robert Montgomery, then president of the Screen Actors Guild, got the lowdown on Willie Bioff and his gang, but never peeped except to the Government and which told it. It was Bob Montgomery who helped the actors out when all salaries were cut 50 per cent. Bob fought back and saw to it that that little deal only lasted eight weeks. He was also our first player in uniform—long before we entered the war. . . . Labor isn't against Gary Cooper doing the life of Eddie Rickenbacker. Coop's only had three letters of protest. But our own Hollywood labor groups are. All six of them got together to ask him not to do it. Seems like another whispering campaign, not against Rick or Cooper, but Producer Winnie Sheehan.

New York, Oct. 19.

Thursday afternoon a British sailor sat in a coach of a Washington-to-New York train, reading a book. After the train had left Philadelphia, he looked up from his reading, and noticed the lady in the coach-seat adjoining him—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt . . . This is how Mrs. Roosevelt happened to be in that coach: She had attended a luncheon given by the "William C. Bullitt for Mayor Committee" in Philadelphia. The train on which she had a Pullman reservation was ten minutes late But another train was in the station, ready to leave. "All right," Mrs. Roosevelt told the stationmaster, "I'll just go into the coach" . . . "But it'll be crowded," said the stationmaster. "Why not wait the ten minutes?" . . . "Ten minutes," replied Mrs. Roosevelt, "will give me enough time to go home first and dress for dinner."

He met you last night" . . . The befogged Richman stared at the ringside table, and then suggested: "If you want to win your money back, bet your friend that I don't remember anything that happened last night."

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

That aviation will take the cream of the passenger service in the postwar world, Admiral Emory Scott Land, chief of war shipping and the Maritime Commission, doesn't deny. But that aviation will haul all the cargo and passengers is so much pecans. This he told members of the Women's Press Club and their guests at the luncheon meeting yesterday at the Willard Hotel.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"Aviation is being grossly exaggerated," said the inimitable Admiral Land. "Personally, I am seriously opposed to any prohibitions or inhibitions to hinder either shipping or aviation. I think the two should supplement each other. When competition in this world dies—I want to die a week in advance."

In answer to public criticism that the United States is allocating too many of its ships to Allies, the admiral in mufti explained that while we allocate many of the ships to Allies we retain the titles to the ships. Also, he pointed out that it is much more economical for us to have the British or Russians man, fuel and run the ships. And that at the peace

Incidentally, handsome Admiral Land wears mufti in the office for a very definite reason. Laughingly, he said that he didn't want the workers to come in, look and say, "I don't want to talk with that blankety-blank sc and so in gold braid."

Touching upon the shortage manpower, the speaker thinks it can be solved by greater productivity per person, per hour, per week. In other words those on the production lines now can do the job by stepping up productivity. Recently he made two off the record appeals to labor unions to quit loafing on the job.

What will happen to the ships after the war? Well, the Admiral suggests an international pool for the Victory Ships. These would be frozen for an emergency. Or it could be a problem for both Congress and the international peace table. Other alternatives are to sell or give them away.

Paying high tribute to the merchant seamen—who always deliver the goods—the Admiral said that the establishment of the Merchant Marine Academy at Kingsport, Long Island, would be a monument that would outlast ships. He predicted that it would rival West Point and Annapolis.

Declaring that the Maritime Union had done a good job and has stuck to the "No strike-no lockout agreement," the admiral figuratively took off his hat to those union members.

It was a gala luncheon. Members turned out full strong to hear the popular Admiral. With him was his equally popular wife. Among the distinguished guests present were: Senora de Caceres, wife of the Honduran Ambassador; Senhora Anesia Pinherio Machado, Brazil's first aviatrix, Mrs. Burnet Maybank, wife of Senator Maybank from South Carolina; the glamorous Claire Booth Luce; Agnes Burke Hale, wife of the Representative from Maine; Mark O'Dea, Palmer Hoyt, publisher of the Oregonian and head of the Domestic Division of OWI, Mrs. Palmer Hoyt and several others. Mrs. Elizabeth May Craig, president, presided and introduced the speakers and honored guests.

University Guild Meets

The problems facing Iran today of a political and economic nature are serious, but they are capable of solution by the Iranians themselves, Dr. Elgin Groseclose told members of the American University Guild of Women yesterday.

A member of the recent American Financial Mission with the appointment of Treasurer General of Iran, Dr. Groseclose, was referring to the reputed Russian and British designs on Persia.

Directing his remarks also at the reports that American advisers are taking over the country, he described the Iranians as an hospitable people who have welcomed the cooperation of other peoples. Although they have invited the assistance of American advisers in particular, Dr. Groseclose emphasized the fact that such cooperation and assistance must be on a basis of mutual respect.

"They need—and they want—no foreign tutelage," Dr. Groseclose maintained. In his opinion the reported difficulties of the financial mission headed by Dr Millspaugh mean "no lessening of the friendly relations that have prevailed between the American and Persian peoples."

"American military activity in Iran has been on a strictly nonpolitical basis," he continued. The American military task in Iran has been to get supplies to Russia, and this job our men have done magnificently. They can 'dish it out' as fast as the Russians can take it."

Dr. Groseclose taught in a mission school in Iran 20 years ago, and his last trip was made early this year. Now an economist at the Bureau of Internal Revenue, his books include "Ararat," "The Persian Journey" and "The Firedrake."

'Two-Year Plan' Mapped By U. S. Campfire Girls

Omaha, Oct. 19 (AP).—Appointment of a committee to formulate a "two-year plan of action" for the Nation's Campfire Girls, embracing war and community service and postwar training, was announced at the national council meeting here today by Mrs. Quade C. Welb, Minneapolis, national president.

The committee: Mrs. Frank Love, Syracuse, N. Y., chairman; Patterson Baine, Columbia, Mo.; Mrs. A. N. Lee, Oklahoma City, Okla., and Mrs. M. E. Jansson, Washington, D. C.

The plan will emphasize that careful guidance is especially needed for older girls who will become homemakers in the immediate postwar era, Mrs. Weld said.

Because many men will return from the war physically handicapped, "the girls to whom they return must be prepared to help them psychologically—in many cases by sharing the responsibility for financing the home," the council added.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The fat child is so often the butt of cruel jokes from playmates, who have no inhibitions about pointing out his weakest points, that when I see a fat boy or girl waddling along I feel it to be a condition parents dare not ignore.

Sometimes this obesity is solely a matter of diet. The child has become a prodigious eater because eating well was considered by the family to be an admirable thing to do. Because excessive fat makes the child less disposed to active exercise and strenuous games, eating becomes an end to itself, an amusement as well as a means of nourishment.

There are families whose metabolism makes it possible for them to store economically every mouthful of food eaten. It is quite probable for the poor, fat child to feel that he eats no more than other children, solely because he makes such good use of what he eats.

A sluggishly-functioning thyroid gland may be the underlying reason why the child piles up fat, despite a sensible diet. In such case the physician may feel it necessary to give glandular treatment along with diet so the food will be burned up more nimbly.

The morale of the fat child—though he looks so good-natured—may suffer under the burdens of feeling himself a ridiculous sight and of being inadequate in games and sports.

In such a situation the child shuns children, stays close to adults who are considerate of his feelings, or makes himself satisfied with one loyal friend. Neither solution will aid his development in sociability.

Treatment for the excessively fat child under the age of puberty (after which the fat may seem to melt away), consists of diet, probably combined with glandular medicines and an encouragement to more active games as well as exercise.

If this three-pronged assault upon fat is successful the child will suffer no psychic scars because of his early fatness.

Our leaflet, "Meals for the School Child," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of this newspaper.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

What the WAACS are learning about using their muscles in tough jobs would be a great help to anyone who does any work that requires pushing, pulling and lifting. These days, that takes in just about everyone.

It's not so much a matter of strength as working posture. Now don't toss this aside as another sermon on posture. You can learn a thing or two about avoiding strain and making your energy last longer.

The new field training manual for the WAC gives the most clear-cut instructions on how to get a job done that I have come across. In pulling, stand with one foot advanced, brace yourself with knees bent, round your back, take a firm grip on the object, and let your body weight do most of the work.

In pushing, again put your weight into it. Lean forward with feet well braced and push against the ground, place your back or one shoulder against the object, and push. You know about lifting. If it is something heavy, start with one foot advanced, bend your knees and get as much of your body as possible underneath. Then, try to carry it so that the weight is distributed over your entire body and your back nearly straight.

In order to stand straight, the muscles running up and down, the length of your spine must be strong. When they are weak, you slump. The muscles of the upper back and neck are intended to hold your head in a balanced position. Carrying your head forward is a sign these muscles are strained and that may be the cause of neckache and headache.

The corrective exercises given in the manual are tops. One is to stand erect, feet parallel and separated, hands clasped in back. Keep your hips tucked under and your neck straight. Don't let your head go forward. Slowly force the arms up and as far away from your body as possible, hold, lower.

Another good exercise is to kneel on the floor, sit back on the heels with the hands clasped in back, and slowly bend forward to touch chest to knees as you move hands up and away from the body. Keep head tipped well back. Return to starting position.

You might finish with this posture standby—also included in the manual: Lie face downward on floor with legs straight down, hands clasped back of hips. Keep legs on floor and raise head, trunk and arms up and back, hold, lower.

Be Kind To Scrubwomen

By Grace Martin

Associated Press Feature Writer

Cleaning women and porters grumble a good deal lately about the bad treatment given public washrooms.

Soap is left floating in washbasins, towels are thrown on the floor. Powder is scattered over the shelves where women place their bags so that it rubs off on every bag placed there. Hair is pulled carelessly from combs and dropped on the floor. Lipsticks are smeared on mirrors and towels. Washrooms are generally left in a sorry looking state at a time when they need to be better kept than ever.

In wartime many washrooms are being used by more people than usual. Often they are being cared for by a reduced number of attendants. So it seems to be part of our war job to help keep the washrooms we use in order. Clean people take their cleanliness standards with them wherever they go. And courteous ones are as considerate of strangers as they are of the members of the family with whom they share a basin at home.

Top-Paying Jobs Remain Vacant in D. C.

The $8000 a year job of Chairman of the Board of Tax Appeals, formerly filled by Jo V. Morgan who resigned last July effective October 1, remained vacant yesterday when it was shown that only four persons had made applications for it.

Two other top administrative jobs also are vacant. The position of a new Water Register, for which $4600 annual salary has been appropriated, was expected to be filled by the Commissioners within a week. The third position, that of a People's Counsel, although authorized by Congress, has never been filled by presidential appointment.

Many Vacancies

A survey of other District departments indicated they were operating with a minimum of personnel. The Police and Fire Departments and the Health Department have the greatest number of vacancies.

The four District attorneys who have submitted their applications for the Board of Tax Appeals position are Glenn Simon, Gilbert L. Hall, Bruce Low and Edward C. Radue. The former three were recommended by the Bar Association, the latter made his individual application.

Out of an authorized personnel of 1836 the Police Department has a total of 202 vacancies; the Fire Department is authorized to employ 900, it has 82 vacancies.

The Health Department, including Gallinger Hospital and Glenn Dale Sanitorium, has 388 vacancies, 155 of which are in the Health Department itself and the remainder in the hospitals.

Dr. Melvin P. Isaminger of the Health Department said yesterday the greatest need was for nurses, explaining that at the present time there were 113 vacancies. Also needed, he said, were 34 part time physicians, six dentists, a number of health inspectors and clerical help. The position of Sanitary Engineer, which pays $5600 a year, has remained vacant because no qualified person can be found, he said.

Ryland Church Observes Centennial

Ryland Methodist Church at Branch and Pennsylvania aves. se., was redolent with recollections of the past last night, as the congregation's centennial celebration began with a historical pageant, "Ryland's First Hundred Years."

Mrs. Cora Walker Hayes looked on from the audience as her wedding 60 years ago to the late Rev. Mr. Frank Hays was re-enacted by Evelyn Bethke and David Newhouse with Miss Bethke wearing the gown in which Mrs. Charles Biggs was married in 1899. The actual wedding took place in the old Ryland Church at 10th and D sts. sw., where the congregation worshipped for 95 years.

At the time of her wedding, Cora Walker was a belle of southwest Washington, and the bridegroom was a minister from Maine. Mrs. Raymond Cole wrote the pageant.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Methodist resident bishop, will address the anniversary banquet Friday at 6:30 p. m. in the parish hall, and the Rev. Karl Newell, pastor, will preside. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives, will address the anniversary services Sunday at 11 a. m.

Mrs. Milan Gates, Surgeon's Widow, Dies; Ill 2 Years

Mrs. Sallie Grant Gates, widow of Dr. Milan Allison Gates, surgeon, died yesterday at Emergency Hospital, after a two years' illness. She lived at 1428 Webster st. nw., and had been a resident of Washington for more than 30 years. Mrs. Gates was born in Fincastle, Va., in 1855.

Active in civic and club circles, she was a member of the National League of American Pen Women, the Eastern Star, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the West Virginia State Society, and was for 17 years treasurer of the Independence Bell Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

She is survived by four nieces, Mrs. Annie R. Marshall, Mrs. D. T. Wilbur, Mrs. Eva Grant Marshall, all of Washington, and Mrs. Frank Dickins of New York, N. Y., and one nephew, James W. Marshall, jr., son of the late James W. Marshall, member of Congress from Virginia's Ninth District for many years.

Burial will be at Ronceverte, W. Va.

Business Group Backs District Home-Rule Bill

Unanimous support for Senator Pat McCarran's bill to grant District residents the right to vote for local Commissioners was voiced yesterday by the Southeast Businessmen's Association.

In a letter sent to the Senate District Committee chairman, Louis F. Frick, secretary of the organization, declared in behalf of its members that the proposal is "a step in the right direction," enabling "citizens of the District to have control, in some respect, over those officials who spend the money of the citizenry and who have not, for a number of years, been in any way responsible or accountable to the local taxpayers."

Surprise Heir Gets More Cash By New Decree

The United States Court of Appeals awarded approximately $28,000 from the sale of Washington real estate to Rufus Lee Page of Ionia, Mich., who never dreamed he would inherit it.

This is the second bounty Page has been awarded from a will in which he wasn't named an heir from a bequest he never expected. Under a Supreme Court of Michigan decision in 1939, Page received approximately $25,000 over the objections of his cousins, who didn't want him to share in what they thought was solely their inheritance.

Humphrey R. Wagar, a Michigan investment man who spent much time in Washington, made a will in 1908 leaving almost all of the $500,000 estate to his four grandchildren, Mrs. Portia W. Marshburn of 2819 P st. nw, H. R. Wagar, jr., Marion W. Page, and Wellington Cass Page, none of whom resided here. However, Wellington Page died in 1915, a year before his grandfather did.

The other three heirs then began a series of suits which varied in success until the Michigan Supreme Court said that while half of Wellington's share should go to Marion Page, who was married and lives in North Carloina, her half-brother, Rufus Page, who was not a descendent of Humphrey Wagar, was to get the rest.

Rufus was surprised, and as his attorney, Henry B. Weaver, jr., put it, "It seemed that Page was the luckiest guy in the world."

The case was brought to District Court early this year because until 1935, half-brothers were not considered legal heirs in Washington. But Justice O'Donoghue decided that under the 1939 law, which he felt held in the case, they were heirs.

The Court of Appeals decided on the basis that when Humphrey Page made his will, he did so according to Michigan law, and meant it in accordance with that law, which recognizes half-brothers as heirs.

Cigarette Supply Not Short Say Experts of WFA

The War Food Administration tangled with the Commerce Department yesterday over the cigarette situation, and announced to dejected smokers that "supplies of cigarettes will continue to be sufficient in volume and quality to meet the demands of United States civilians."

The Commerce Department in a monthly publication issued October 6 stated that "a substantial gap between demand and supply must be expected," because 42 per cent of the 1943 crop of flue-cured tobacco will be exported, that domestic needs will more than absorb the remainder, and that reserve supplies are dwindling.

The W. F. A. said these facts were true, but they didn't mean a shortage of cigarettes. The agency said that in other years exports have averaged 56 per cent of the crop.

Manufacturers' stocks now total more than one billion pounds for domestic use, and the excess of demand over new supplies will only decrease this stock by 125 million pounds, which "is not at all a serious situation."

Soldiers Need Better Money Order Service

Desperate needs of transient servicemen who want to cash postoffice money orders in Union Station on Sundays will be discussed with the D. C. Bankers Association and the Treasury Department, it was announced yesterday at the War Hospitality Committee meeting.

Members of the committee told of delays in obtaining money for train fare for soldiers just returned to the United States and having postal orders.

Last week a contingent of 35 men were reported to have been in Union Station for six hours with postal orders which could not be cashed.

Chairman Floyd Akers of the committee said efforts would be made to set up a postal order service at the new United Nations Service Center, near the station, which will open October 27 in the Capitol Park Hotel.

Additional volunteers to operate the center are needed for the 8 a. m. to 12 noon shift, Mrs. Harry Bernton announced.

Winfree Johnson, chairman of servicemen's lodging, said a congressional proposal for a $100,000 structure on the east side of the station had the approval of the committee. He said such an additional lodging facility would be useful.

Additional USO funds for enlisted men's lodging are available through the national oragnizations, Mabel Cooke, chairman of the committee on volunteer training, announced.

Windsor Confers With U. S. Officers Of High Rank

The Duke of Windsor, who arrived here Monday by train with his duchess after a vacation at Hot Springs, Va., made official visits to Admiral Ernest J. King and high ranking United States Army officers yesterday, it was disclosed by the British Information Services.

The duke, who plans to confer with officials of the War Food Administration during his visit here, had luncheon at the home of Lieut. Gen. G. N. Macready, head of the British army staff in Washington, at 3265 N st. nw. The duchess made social calls.

The couple plan to go to New York Friday before returning to their home in Nassau.

Man Blameless In Emergency Act, Court Rules in Suit

The United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that "when the driver of an automobile is suddenly confronted with an emergency not of his own making and is compelled to act instantly, he is not guilty of negligence if he makes a choice such as a person of ordinary prudence would make in a similar situation, even though it afterwards develops he might have made a wiser choice."

On this basis, the court dismissed a $10,000 damage suit brought by Lillian Gatton of 212 10th st. sw., and a $15,000 damage suit brought by Sarah Morgan of the same address, against Gibbons Cullins of 506 7th st. sw.

The two women were seriously injured during an accident on a trip from Washington to Leonardtown, Md. Testimony was introduced that Cullins' car, thrown out of control swerved from its lane in front of the other car, striking it head on. The appelants said Cullins should have driven onto a shoulder of the road.

Cullins was represented by Attorney Howard Boyd.

Legion of Merit Citation Awarded Colonel Glassford

Col. Pelham D. Glassford, former chief of Washington police, has been awarded the Legion of Merit for outstanding service while serving as director of the Internal Security division of the Provost Marshal General's office, the War Department announced yesterday.

GLASSFORD

Attached to the Military Police, he was cited for "developing and administering principles of internal security for the protection of the resources of war throughout the United States, and in his participation as a representative of the Secretary of War in important civilian organizations whose efforts are directed to the conservation of life and property important to the war effort."

Colonel Glassford, who was police chief in 1932, resigned after he was criticized for being too sympathetic to the bonus marchers.

Defendant Blames Ickes Order in Speed Arrest

E. S. Villmoare, secretary to Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri, charged in Traffic Court yesterday that Secretary Ickes has ordered park police to make more arrests or lose their jobs.

Villmoare was charged with driving at 46 miles an hour in Rock Creek Park. He denied the charge, but was found guilty of traveling at 40 miles an hour and fined $15 by Judge George D. Neilson.

Villmoare said, "It is a matter of common knowledge that Mr. Ickes is demanding more arrests on the threat of getting policemen's jobs if it isn't done."

When Villmoare asked arresting officer T. G. Huddleston if this was true, the latter asked Judge Neilson, "Do I have to answer that?"

It was ruled that no answer was necessary.

Judge Neilson said, "I don't know if Secretary Ickes is interested in having more traffic arrests made. If he is, however, it is only because he is interested in saving gas and rubber which are so vital to the war effort."

NAPOLEON AND UNCLE ELBY — By Clifford McBride

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SECRETARY Hull might have got some interesting pointers for his Moscow trip from Cuban Ambassador Concheso, only Latin-American diplomat who has met Stalin.

Brilliant Senor Concheso is both Cuban Ambassador to the U. S. A. and Cuban Minister to Soviet Russia. Recently he came back from a visit to the Soviet capital during which he presented his credentials to Foreign Minister Molotoff, and expressed the polite hope that he might also call upon Stalin. Knowing that Stalin was one of the busiest men in the world, however, Concheso did not press the point and actually did not expect to see him.

So he almost fell out of his ballet seat one night when someone tapped him on the shoulder and told him that Stalin would see him in 20 minutes. How Stalin knew the Cuban diplomat was enjoying the famous Moscow Ballet, Concheso did not know. In fact, he thought at first that someone was playing a practical joke.

However, he was told that a motor would call for him at the theater in 15 minutes, and he should be ready. Concheso consulted a British diplomat, also present at the ballet, who told him that the man who had tapped him on the shoulder was the Russian chief of protocol, so he had better be ready.

It was May, but zero weather in Moscow. However, Ambassador Concheso did not find it cold in the Kremlin. (Churchill wore a zipper-suit when he called on Stalin, and Mrs. Hull has been worrying on behalf of her husband about the cold in the Kremlin.) Only two officers guarded Stalin. One officer met the Cuban at the entrance of the building and escorted him to Stalin's office. There he was met by another officer who took him the rest of the way. There was no pomp or ceremony.

Genial Joseph

STALIN himself was not fierce, but kindly and genial. His eyes, according to Ambassador Concheso, are deep and penetrating, but with wrinkles of humor in the corners.

The Soviet premier seemed surprisingly well-posted on Cuban problems, knew something about its labor laws and its economic questions. However, he was not familiar with Cuban-U. S. relations and seemed to think that Cuba was still politically dependent on the U. S. A. The Ambassador explained that the Platt Amendment had been abrogated and Cuba now enjoyed complete freedom.

Stalin also remarked that there was one American country, Argentina, which still cooperated with the Axis and suggested that it was about time the United States took Argentina in tow and forced it to join up with the Allies. He was quite positive about this, and seemed definitely under the impression that the United States had complete control of the entire American continent.

Ambassador Concheso explained that not only was Argentina distant from the United States but that the U. S. A. took pains to respect the independence of Latin-American states.

The interview lasted about 45 minutes. Concheso told friends later that he could not help liking Stalin. One thing he noted was Stalin's clothes. Although simply cut they were of excellent quality.

Capital Chaff

CAPT. RALPH INGERSOLL, drafted away from his editorship of the newspaper PM, was detailed by the Army to help pilot the Five Flying Senators on part of their war-zone trip. It is reported that Ingersoll is being queried by the War Department as to who leaked certain information to the Senators . . . Economic Stabilizer Vinson says that although Senator Byrd of Virginia, largest apple-grower in the world, did come to see him about a higher price for apples, Byrd said the price increase would not affect him much one way or the other. Byrd said his apples were a specialized product, wrapped in paper and packed for the fresh market . . . Alabama's Frank Boykin has a secret accomplishment in addition to his record as a courageous Congressman. He can ride on the radiator of a car going 40 miles an hour and shoot doves. And he hits 'em . . . Gov. Matt Neeley of West Virginia, former United States Senator, will run for the House of Representatives in the First West Virginia Congressional District. It was as a Congressman that Neeley began his long career in public life.

Wire-Tapping

IF ALL the dictaphone records taken by the Government, both by tapping telephones and inter-office communications, were put in one pile they would probably provide enough wax to supply all the radio stations of the Nation for a year.

It has now got so that every official talking over the phone figures that his words are being taken down on a record, either in the office of the man he is talking to or by an outside "intelligence" agency.

Most prolific wire-tappers are the Army and Navy. But the other day R. S. Dean, assistant director of the Bureau of Mines, ran across a new wrinkle during an argument he had with Lieut. Col. E. F. Jeffe, assistant to WPB's Charles E. Wilson. The Bureau of Mines favored the production of electrolytic manganese by the American Alloys and Chemicals Corp. at Oakland, Calif., but the War Production Board turned the project down.

When the Bureau of Mines took exception to certain WPB statements, Col. Jeffe had the audacity to admit that he had taken a dictaphone record of everything the Bureau of Mines said over the phone. Writing to Assistant Director Dean, Jeffe said:

"If you desire to listen to the transcription of the verbatim conversation, I will make arrangements so that you may do so."

To this Director Dean hotly wrote back:

"I am interested to know that the office of the executive vice chairman of the War Production Board has gone in for the use of the dictaphone without the common courtesy of advising the person who is called upon that he is speaking for the record."

Prominent Rectors Attend Conference At D. C. Cathedral

Twenty prominent Episcopal rectors from several States are attending the second conference of the College of Preachers at Washington Cathedral Canon Theodore O. Wedel, warden of the college, announced yesterday.

Dr. Wallace E. Rollins of Sweet Briar, Va., is leading the conference, the theme of which is "The Preacher's Study of the Life of Christ."

The College of Preachers invites clergy from all over America for brief periods of post-graduate study. They attend lectures, participate in group discussions, and preach sermons which are criticized by the group and by the college staff.
